Daladier Sees Critics Of Waiting Policy In Secret Session; Press Urges Action

Pressure Rises

Paris, March 14.—Resentment against what is considered by many as the failure of the Allies to give timely and effective aid to Finland led to the sudden decision this afternoon to hold a secret session of the Senate.

The debate was scheduled to cover not only the causes and consequences of the Finnish debacle, but the organization of the command of both land and air forces in France, the war policy of the government, its diplomatic action, the activity of Hitler's Communist agents and the reasons why the League of Nations had not been called on to do something about the sinking of neutral ships.

For the first time since the war began there was noticeable both in the Senate and the Chamber an atmosphere of irritation and resentment. The placidity of the past few months has been shaken and the usual French Republican course of looking for someone on whom to put the blame has begun.

Press Asks Action

The press also gave clear indication today that the collapse of Finland's resistance has caused a profound movement of opinion, which is somewhat confused as to whether Germany or Russia is the enemy, but seems to be stirred to the opinion that more must be done than to sit still behind the Maginot Line at a cost of 1,000,000,000 francs a day if the war is to be won or French prestige maintained.

This afternoon's secret session of the Senate began on a note of attack. Former Premier Laval and Senator Henri Lemaire were scheduled to ask that a date be fixed by the government for the hearing of their interpellations on the diplomatic conduct of the war and on the war policy of the government.

Hearing Is Surprised

Daladier declared he was at the disposal of the Senate at once for all questions which had to do with Finland and the diplomatic and general conduct of the war. He recommended that the discussion should be conducted in secret and asked that the interpellation on the next command be postponed until next week.

Senator Charles Reibel expressed astonishment at the haste the Government was showing to deal with questions on the conduct of the war. Laval said the date for answering his queries had been changed several times. Daladier excused himself for these changes which, he said, were due to the rapid succession of events. He had had to alter the hour of his interview with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles in order to be present in

100,000 Finns Forsake Homes Lost to Russia

Sorrowing Army Of Refugees Moves To Escape Red Rule

By Lynn Heinzelring

Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, March 14.—A new army was on the march tonight in saddest Finland—an army of 100,000 men, women and children forsaking their homes in ceded territory to find strange homes within Finland's newly shrunken frontiers.

By foot, in autos, wagons and on trains they moved through the snow-covered country, taking their pigs, horses and cattle with them. They carried what clothing and family heirlooms they could gather on short notice before their land is turned over to Russia.

500,000 in Refugee Centers

Approximately 500,000 other persons are in refugee centers, having fled there for protection early in the war.

About 140,000 of them may return to their homes—what Russian bombs have left of them—but Finland must find new homes and new livelihoods some place in the rock-bound land for about 460,000.

Juho Kivisto, assistant minister of agriculture, who is in charge of moving the people, said that no pressure had been brought to force families to leave the ceded areas, but that experience showed virtually none of them wanted to live under Russian rule.

Most of those to be moved are

Auto Jam Closes Underpass As Curious Throng To Try It Out

By Howard F. Wentworth

One of the worst rush-hour traffic jams in recent years late yesterday clogged Massachusetts avenue from Scott Circle east to beyond Twelfth street northwest as hundreds of curious motorists tried out the newly opened Thomas Circle underpass.

Shortly after 5 p. m., as District traffic officials looked helplessly on, police were forced to close the new tunnel to westbound vehicles and send reserves to unsmother the tangle of stalled cars at a dozen intersections throughout the area.

An unusual number of "right-turners" plus the usual crowd of homebound-bound motorists and a driving rain were blamed by authorities for the tieup.

Traffic Director Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, agreed it was one of the worst—if not the worst—congestion messes they had ever seen in Washington.

Britain Bars Canned Fruit Importation

$14,000,000 Bought From U. S.; Step Taken To Save Exchange

By the Associated Press

London, March 14.—Britain will stop importing canned and bottled fruits March 19, the Board of Trade announced tonight. A spokesman said the purpose was to save foreign exchange.

Shipments on the way before March 15 will not be affected. Technically the order prohibits imports except under license, but a spokesman for the board—the British government's commerce department—said no licenses would be granted.

In 1938 more than $14,000,000 worth of canned and bottled fruits were imported from the United States, the spokesman said, and such imports from all countries in 1938 totaled about $25,200,000.

The principal fruits bought from the United States in containers have been peaches, pears, apricots, grapefruit and fruit salad. Fruit juices are not affected by the order.

Britain stopped importing fresh apples and pears early in the war.

Congressmen Greet Notice With Indignation

an International News Service

Indignation over Great Britain's announcement last night of restrictions on imports of canned and bottled fruits from the United States ran high in Congressional circles.

An outright demand for cessation of all negotiations for reciprocal trade agreements was made by Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Republican Senate Leader McNary, of Oregon, was joined by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, in forecasting the British blow to American exports would give strength to the Senate forces demanding that all reciprocal trade agreements be subjected to Senate approval before they can become effective.

Crippled Girl Aids Cause Of Shut-ins

The appearance of Martha Geesling, 22-year-old cripple, on a hospital carriage in behalf of a $22,400 appropriation for the education of shut-in children yesterday brought a promise from Chairman Millard Caldwell, of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, that the appeal will be considered seriously.

"There's a great deal of merit to the request," commented Representative Caldwell, whose own son was killed by a hit-and-run driver in Washington, a year ago.

Miss Geesling, whose legs were amputated after a cave-in accident 13 years ago, told the subcommittee that she has received her only schooling within the last two years and that it was provided by the WPA, which will discontinue the service at the end of the fiscal year.

Arrives in Ambulance

Because of the campaign conducted by The Washington Post for the educational appropriation, Miss Geesling was taken from Emergency Hospital, where she has lived for the last two years, to the Capitol by an ambulance furnished by the Hyson funeral home.

Under the direction of Mrs. Odette O'Hara, president of the Association for the Education of Handicapped Children, several other crippled children who have been given home instruction under the WPA project were taken before the subcommittee accompanied by their mothers.

These included Jack Binder, 10; Arthur Olsen, 7; Vivian Vaughn, 13; and Robert Rosman, 8. Nearly two score civic and trade spokesmen were heard by the subcommittee within a little more than three hours at the hearings on the 1941 District supply bill (started on Monday) were concluded in record time.

Chairman Caldwell said that the subcommittee will confer next week with welfare officials before marking up the bill, but he declined to say whether any additional appropriations above budget estimates will be allowed.

Management Criticized

The welfare institutions, he said, are suffering from "lack of direction or management." He repeated that considerable improvements can be effected by a more efficient use of funds.

Caldwell said that he believed the District government in general is operating efficiently.

"The institutions are your sore spots," he said.

He pointed out that the subcommittee is confronted with the problem of keeping the supply bill within anticipated revenue and that Auditor Daniel J. Donovan estimates that the District will be

Colder Predicted Today as Rain Changes to Snow

A cold wave moving over Eastern Virginia changed rain to snow in the District last night, and brought the promise of lower temperatures for today.

The weather Bureau, however, predicted clearing skies, and issued a Saturday forecast of fair weather and slowly rising temperatures.

Last night's cold wave followed a day in which more than one inch of water fell, the Weather Bureau reported. Temperatures rose from 32 degrees at 8 a. m. to 43 degrees at 4 p. m., then fell steadily to 30 degrees at midnight.

Local conditions were described as part of disturbance moving northeastward. The Weather Bureau ordered storm warnings posted from the Delaware breakwater to Boston, and last night the cold wave was heading toward the north Atlantic States, carrying a threat of general low temperatures, ice and snow.

Thousands of Mexico City residents saw falling snow for the first time in their lives last night when shortly after 8:30 o'clock a light snowfall began. The snow did not remain long, as brief rain squalls followed, melting the white flakes.

The Senate completed Congressional action yesterday on a $1,032,801,095 appropriations bill for the Treasury and Postoffice departments. The measure carried $1,032,801,095 less than President Roosevelt's budget estimates.

Senate Adds Curb on Gifts To Hatch Bill

Campaign Donation Limit of $5,000 Is Passed, 40-38; Pepper Move Loses

By John B. Oakes

Winning an unexpected victory, Senate opponents of the Hatch bill yesterday succeeded in vastly strengthening the measure and at the same time lessening its chances of ultimate passage in the House.

By a margin of two votes, the Senate accepted an amendment by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, forbidding campaign contributions in excess of $5,000. The tally, in doubt until the last vote was counted, was 40 to 38.

An avowed opponent of the Hatch bill to prohibit political activity by Federal-paid State employees, Senator Bankhead gained the support of practically all the steadfast antagonists of the bill, plus a few who previously backed Senator Hatch. One Republican, Senator Frazier, of North Dakota, left the Hatch forces to vote for the amendment.

Trouble Expected in the House

Aimed frankly at large-scale Republican campaign contributions, the amendment was offered "in hopes it would kill the bill by driving away Republican support," several Senators observed. But Minority Leader McNary declared the Senate Republicans would maintain their stand in favor of the measure, despite the Bankhead amendment against which they voted all but unanimously.

Cloakroom gossip persisted, however, to the effect that when the bill in its present form passes the Senate, it will find even greater difficulty in meeting House approval than would otherwise have been the case.

Senator Hatch himself said that "the amendment has some merit, and I don't particularly object to it." He explained that he voted against it because he felt its sponsors hoped to use it to kill the bill.

Final Vote Put Off

After passage of the Bankhead amendment, the Senate settled down to an afternoon of speechmaking which delayed a final vote on the bill at least until today. While Hatch's opponents vigorously denied that any filibuster was in progress, Majority Leader Barkley again found it impossible to obtain unanimous consent to limit debate and thereby insure a vote today.

Nevertheless, it still seemed likely that a vote would be reached this week, especially since pressure is increasing for Senate action on the agriculture appropriation bill.

$5,000 Fine Provided

The Bankhead amendment flatly forbids individuals or corporations to contribute more than a total of $5,000 in any calendar year or during one campaign, to candidates or political organizations. It provides a fine of at least $5,000, in addition to a maximum penitentiary sentence of five years.

Doctor Sees Hope For 2 Out of 5 Childless Couples

Two out of every five childless couples may become parents through proper medical treatment, Dr. Paul Titus, of Pittsburgh, told the Smith-Reed-Russell Society at George Washington University School of Medicine yesterday.

Lecturing on "Sterility," he pointed out that artificial insemination—testube babies—is still a procedure of doubtful value. Not only are results uncertain, he said, but a grave moral problem which looms more important as the child grows up is raised if an outside "donor" is utilized to induce pregnancy.

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the medical school, presided over the meeting. Dr. Howard F. Kane, professor of obstetrics, was host to the visiting lecturer at a luncheon given at the Cosmos Club following the meeting.

The announcement was made in Chicago by the Friends of American Writers which presents the award each year to a Midwestern author whose work shows the greatest originality of technique and value as a piece of Americana.

Grosselock, of 2911 Thirty-third place northwest, is 40, and a native of Oklahoma.

Man Dies in Battle With Pilot As Plane Dives Into Harbor

Aviator Says Passenger Struck Him On Head With Pliers Half Mile Up; Police Believe Suicide Was Motive

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., March 14.—A man tentatively identified as a former theatrical publicity writer today found in spectacular manner the death which police said he sought when a plane fell into New York Harbor following a dramatic battle between passenger and pilot a half mile up.

Pilot Joseph Rosemarin, 38, of Brooklyn, was rescued, but New York harbor and local police worked into the night under floodlights, grappling for the body of the passenger where the plane fell near the Statue of Liberty.

A friend of the pilot, Attorney Mortimer Rabson, of New York, and a woman told police the missing man was apparently Emanuel Eisenberg, 35, of New York. Rabson said Eisenberg resigned last year as press agent for the Group Theater in New York and went to Mexico to write a book. He said he had seen the man in New York recently.

Miss Ruth Eisenberg telephoned that her cousin, Emanuel, had gone up with a pilot named Rosemarin. After hearing Rosemarin's graphic, tense story of the struggle in the skies at Jersey City Medical Center and questioning Rabson, Police Inspector Henry Gautier said tersely: "It is simply a case of suicide."

Rosemarin said the passenger, who was seated beside him, picked up a pair of pliers and struck him over the head. Rosemarin struggled with the man, trying to keep control of his plane. Holding the plane's "stick" with one hand and reaching for the passenger's throat with the other, the pilot made a nose-dive toward the water. While diving, the pilot told police, the passenger attempted to jump out. After the plane reached the water, his body was seen to roll from the cockpit.

Gunman Strikes Nurse Supervisor; Liquor Shop Robbed

Footpads and a bandit struck three times in a half hour last night within a few blocks, collected almost $200 and left a young woman with a battered nose, while other robberies accounted for more than $500 cash and property.

Meanwhile, 23 victims of recent holdups attended a lineup of 20 suspects at police headquarters without an identification.

Liquor Store Held Up

Gwendolyn Ireson, of 816 E street northeast, supervisor of nurses at Providence Hospital, was on her way to a meeting of the Blackfriars Guild at St. Paul's Hall, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, when she was held up by a colored youth. She said he entered her automobile while she was parking near the hall, thrust a gun in her face and struck her and fled when she screamed.

A lone white man held up Samuel Tramer, of 1734 Trinidad avenue northeast, manager of a liquor store at 1448 P street northwest, and Joshua Goldbaum, bookkeeper. He escaped with $186 and a quart of whiskey.

Winifred M. Hager, of 2310 Connecticut avenue northwest, was robbed of her pocketbook containing jewelry valued at $7.50, at Kalorama road and Twentieth street northwest, by a colored man.

Cash Carrier Looted

Albert T. Nicholson, of 771 Nineteenth street northeast, employee of a gasoline station at 1302 H street northeast, reported his cash carrier, containing $16, was missing. Later it was found empty in an ash can in the rear of the station.

FCA Official Resisted 'Political Pressure,' Master Taber Says

The "forced resignation" of Albert S. Goss, Land Bank commissioner for seven years, yesterday was described by the National Grange as "an irreparable loss to American agriculture."

L. J. Taor, master of the influential farm organization, warned that "literally millions of people . . . will keenly regret this treatment of a conscientious, tireless and faithful public servant."

Roy Green, of Kansas, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration, was named yesterday by President Roosevelt to succeed Goss.

Meanwhile, Representative Jones (Democrat), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, expressed surprise at "some of the extreme expressions" in a statement by Goss after his resignation was made public yesterday.

Goss had attacked the Jones bill, which would lower farm loan interest rates and abolish the provision by which farmers take 5 per cent of their loans in land bank 1940.

Ex-Businessman To Pay $1,200,000 Tax, 1939's Largest

New York, March 14 (AP).—A retired businessman filed his 1939 income tax report today and told the Government he owed a tax of $1,200,000. He sent along a check for $300,000 to cover the first quarterly payment. It was the largest individual return received thus far this year in New York.

Unsigned Answers Allowed On Census Income Queries

By Felix Cotten

Yielding to the furor raised in Congress, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins yesterday gave the average citizen the option of inclosing unsigned answers to questions concerning his income in a sealed envelope to be handed to census enumerators.

If he has no objection he will answer the income questions, along with the others, orally. In any event he is still required by law to answer them.

Meanwhile, it appeared that Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, may have run into a legislative stone wall in his attempt to obtain action on his resolution putting the Senate on record against the income questions before the 1940 census enumerators start ringing doorbells on April 1.

By the time these matters are disposed of, it is expected, the census takers will be in the field. The envelope in which citizens are permitted to inclose replies to the two income questions will be franked, and will be mailed by the enumerator to the Census Bureau here. The enumerator will furnish the envelope and a blank piece of paper.

Dual Tax Program

By James D. Seecrest

Post Staff Writer

The combined sales tax and personal income levy on earnings above $10,000, rejected by Congress last year, was revived and approved yesterday by the House subcommittee on fiscal affairs as a substitute for the present income tax.

The new revenue proposal, if enacted, will not become operative until 1941, so that District officials will proceed with the task of collecting the income tax due April 15 despite the confusion occasioned by the United States Court of Appeals ruling as to domicile last Monday.

The effect of the new tax program, if adopted by Congress, will be to increase the tax burden by more than $5,000,000 over the current revenue.

Chairman Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was assured of a majority vote for the so-called Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, swung over from the income-tax proponents, of which he was a member last year.

Both Republican members of the subcommittee, Everett M. Dickson, of Illinois, and George J. Bates, of Massachusetts, opposed the dual tax program and announced they would fight it in the full District Committee and on the House floor.

The sales tax proposed in the new Nichols bill is 2 per cent, with food and medicine exempt, while the income levy ranges from 1 to 7 per cent on earned income in excess of $10,000 and unearned income above $500.

While there was some confusion among members of the subcommittee as to when the tax bill would become operative, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal said that the sales tax would begin January 1, 1941, and that the income levy would be due April 1 and June 15, 1941, and applicable to income received during the calendar year 1940.

The sales tax was not scheduled to begin July 1, when the fiscal year opens, it was said, because the second half of the present income tax falls due October 15.

The new measure does not disturb the current tax of 5 per cent on corporate earnings.

No official estimates of the amount of revenue that would be raised by the tax bill were released, but members of the subcommittee recalled that Pond study last year estimated $5,500,000 might be raised by a 2 per cent sales tax and $1,275,000 from a personal income tax on earnings in excess of $14,000.

$1,000,000 Yield Is Seen

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, anticipated no more than $1,000,000 from the present income tax before Seal's interpretation of domicile was challenged.

Chairman Nichols pointed out that the 1939 revenue act failed to provide a return as large as had been obtained from the two taxes repealed, - the business privileges and intangible personal property levies. Donovan recalled that the

GILT OFF THE DOME

CENSUS PUZZLE: The fury of Senator Tobey's attack on the census questions makes the Capitol wonder: What is it that Senator Tobey doesn't want to tell the census man?

There must be something. So far as known, the immaculate Mr. Tobey has no old divorces or outdoor toilets to conceal; does not share his 1200 sq. bath-rooms with anyone, and will not need to reveal how far his income exceeds $5,000 a year. Maybe he's just secretive.

INSIDER'S GUESS: At least one member of Roosevelt's Cabinet is positive the President will not seek a third term.

And he is a Roosevelt-before-1932 veteran who has nothing to lose by a third term.

But he prefers not to be quoted.

"A President about to retire," he explains, "will lose influence abroad as well as at home. If Mr. Roosevelt eliminated himself now from the 1940 campaign he would also eliminate himself as a potential peacemaker and weaken himself as a guardian of American interests."

"What's more," he added, "this country suffers an 18-month interregnum, with almost total loss of its world influence, every 4 or 8 years when it appears likely the incumbent President is about to be replaced."

"the rah-rah stuff fooled him."

GARNER DECEIVED: In appraising his own Presidential prospects, Vice President Garner, like his friends, was deceived by the hurrah-for-Jack, isn't he a great guy spirit which prevails in the United States Senate.

Garner is the most popular Vice President of our era, perhaps of all time, with the Senators over whom he occasionally presides.

His bluff, he-man ways, his Texas gemütlichkeit, have won him deep affection even from many in "the world's most exclusive club" who don't agree with him.

Often the Senators seem on the verge of carrying him on their shoulders from the chamber to his office or vice-versa.

Naturally, he could expect this devotion to be converted into powerful support by the Senators in their own States.

But it didn't turn out that way. Some Senators who have always thrown their hats dogmatically high in the air for Jack Garner—conversationally—haven't moved a finger to help him get delegates.

They had other fish to fry.

OOH-LA-LAHS FOR OTTO: At an off-the-record dinner for Archduke Otto, some august Capital ladies bobbed and curtsied to him like so many schoolgirls, as if he were really King of Austria-Hungary. He looks enough like a genuine royal pretender to play the role without a make-up, and the ladies were a-twitter as they made over him.

"the thirteenth guest screamed"

The men liked him, too, with his boyish eagerness about three "united states" federations in Europe—Balkan, Baltic and Western Europe.

But what impressed them more was that his brother, Archduke Felix, with the receding chin, has booked 22 lectures in this country at $1,000 a crack and thinks there's more gold in them hills than in archduking.

DUCKS 13: When beauteous Mrs. Harry Woodring gave a luncheon for Mrs. Roosevelt she had a table set for 14. But one guest unaccountably failed to appear—leaving just 13. No one was superstitious, of course—but Mrs. Woodring's sister quietly but heroically tiptoed away, leaving only 12 at the table.

COCKY RUSKI: When a smartly told one of Washington's foremost Moscow spokesmen that one of the Cowles radio stations in South Dakota had quickly raised $7,000 in small donations to help the Finns, the pro-Russ chap smiled sardonically.

"Off the record," he said, "you tell South Dakota that the Russians will take care of that money when it reaches Finland, and spend it wisely."

But the gossip persists here among diplomats that having won a minor victory in Finland the Russians will be glad of a breathing spell before they lose any more tail feathers.

Walter Reed Today
Representative Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, 81-year-old chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, will leave Walter Reed Hospital today to return to his hotel apartment, his aides said yesterday.

The Congressman went to the Army hospital on January 13, threatened with pneumonia. Mrs. Taylor, who went to the hospital before her husband for an eye operation, also will return to their apartment when he does. Surgeons removed a cataract from her right eye.

The Gallup Poll

New York, Key State of Coming Election, Found Leaning Democratic in Survey

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 15.—Nearly all the political commentators believe that New York State is the key to the 1940 election—that which ever party can win this richest political prize in the union is almost certain to carry the Nation. With the largest number of electoral votes (47) and the largest voting population, New York is the subject of intense speculation in all political dope tables. It was a border-line State in the Dewey-Lehman election of 1938, when the Democrats squeaked through by a microscopic majority. What is the trend today? Which party leads in the race to capture the State that can make a break President?

Nine months ago studies of political sentiment by the Institute found the Republicans ahead in New York State. But with the outbreak of war in September, Roosevelt and the Democratic Party shot upward in popularity throughout the country for a gain of 5 to 7 percentage points—a trend reflected in New York State. "Special cross-section studies today show the Democrats holding the popular lead in the State, although the margin is small.

Margin is Slim
The survey question and results are as follows:

"What party would you like to see win the Presidential election this year?"
New York State Voters
Want Republicans to Win 47

Republicans can take comfort in the fact that while President Roosevelt carried the State in 1936 by 60 per cent, the Democratic majority today is slim. Democrats, on the other hand, can point to the fact that the Republicans have slipped in popularity since last summer in comparison with earlier Institute studies.

Recent Election Tests
The last official test of party strength in New York State was the election of Judge Irving Lehman as Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals last November. Judge Lehman, the only candidate in the race, was endorsed by all three parties, Republican, Democratic and American Labor Party.

One commentator in writing about the election stated recently that the Republicans cast more votes than the Democrats and American Labor Party combined, and concluded that the G. O. P. is the strongest party today in this all-important key State.

But this conclusion failed to take into account one special factor in the counting of the ballots.

Votes Were Limited
In 12 counties where a total of 462,365 ballots were cast, the vote was not counted by parties separately, but was recorded for all three major parties in a lump. These ballots were placed in the Republican column with an accompanying explanation. As a result the Republican vote appeared to be bigger than it actually was.

If the 462,365 votes are distributed between the parties on the basis of how other counties voted, results would show the Republicans casting only 48 per cent as against 52 per cent for the Democrats and American Labor Party combined. In 1936 the American Labor Party endorsed Roosevelt.

The sharp political division which has been noted for years between up-State New York and New York City is reflected in the Institute's surveys. In New York City, 69 per cent of voters polled say they want to see victory for the Democrats and 31 per cent for the Republicans.

Puerto Rican notables, United States Government officials and leaders in the dental profession in this country will assemble at Walter Reed Hospital tomorrow afternoon for the presentation of a plaque in memory of Maj. Fernando E. Rodriguez, of the United States Army Dental Corps.

Representing the American College of Dentists, honorary dental group, its president, Dr. A. W. Bryan, of Iowa City, will present the bronze tablet. Before a representative of the Puerto Rican resident commissioner, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar H. Chapman, and more than 200 others, it will be accepted by Lieut. Col. T. P. Bull, head of the Army Medical Center's Dental School.

The ceremony, to be held in Sternberg Hall auditorium at 3 p. m., will commemorate scientific research in dentistry by Maj. Rodriguez, a native of Puerto Rico, who died at Walter Reed in 1932. He was graduated from Georgetown University Dental School.

Gambler Met 2 Policemen, Rookie Says

Bribe Trial Witness
Links Convicted Man
To Brodie and Murray

A special trial board is expected to return a verdict today in the trial of Policemen Hubert E. (Steve) Brodie and Leo (Nix) Murray, demoted detective sergeants, charged with accepting a bribe and with prejudicial conduct.

After an all-day trial at the District building, in which the defense failed to place a single witness on the stand, the board took the case at 3:45 p. m. After deliberating 40 minutes, the board adjourned until 10:15 a. m. today.

Parts of the testimony of a key prosecution witness was barred when the board upheld the contention by the attorney for the witness that any statements "made by my client might incriminate him."

Appearing in behalf of Carl T. Updyke, convicted operator of a gambling establishment where the defendants' alleged offenses occurred, Attorney William A. Gallagher argued against Updyke's testifying on the charges against Brodie and Murray.

Updyke was called to the stand after Eugene B. Watson, rookie policeman, who said he was an "undercover" man for Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, testified that he saw Updyke give Brodie and Murray a sum of money in front of 905 1/2 G street northwest on October 14.

Under cross-examination by Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch, Updyke said that he was indicted on 11 counts of gambling in connection with the operation of a newsstand at the G street address. He admitted seeing Brodie and Murray on several occasions "but never to talk to."

The witness refused to answer when Gasch pressed with the question of whether he knew the defendants "in a business or social way."

Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the tax appeals board and chairman of the special board, which included Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the ABC Board, and Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, dismissed Updyke from the stand when the board decided his testimony would "tend to incriminate him."

Called as the first prosecution witness, Watson told the board he was appointed a policeman April 1, 1939, and took up his assignment "as undercover man" about the second week in April without having attended the police school, as is customary.

He first noticed gaming law violations at 905 1/2 G street northwest, he stated, "right after he started work," and said he went to the place of his own accord.

On October 14, he stated, he saw an automobile drive up in front of the establishment, at which time he was "helping out," and when he approached the car heard its occupants say "Detective Bureau."

Hands Met, He Says

"I went inside to get a detective magazine," the witness said, "I saw Updyke, whom I had observed take race and numbers bets, go to the cash register, take out some money, fold it in his hand, and go to the car."

He leaned over the running board and, with his head and shoulders inside, extended his hand to meet another hand. I cannot say whether the money changed hands or not."

Watson identified Brodie and Murray as the two men in the automobile and produced a license tag number, which was held to be Brodie's number.

House Passes Bill to Add 10 Judgeships

By the Associated Press

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill to create ten new Federal judgeships.

They are:
One on Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, embracing the States of Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and Tennessee.

Two on the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, serving Arkansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North and South Dakota.
One Federal district judge each for the following:
Southern California, New Jersey, Northern Georgia, Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New York, Western Oklahoma, and Northern Illinois.

The increases in the circuit courts would be permanent, but the district court increases would be temporary.

In order to prevent a permanent increase in the size of the district judiciary the first vacancy occurring in any district for which a judgeship was voted would go unfilled.

Before passage of the bill Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, told the House that Francis Biddle, solicitor general, was being prepared for the Supreme Court.

Jenkins made the remark as part of a general attack on the bill.

Walter Defends Biddle

"Instead of more judges," said Jenkins, "we need better judges." He referred, without mentioning any name, to a Federal court appointee "who had not tried a case in 20 years."

Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, manager of the bill for the Democrats, replied to Jenkins it was "too bad the gentleman has not read the speech made at a dinner in honor of Mr. Biddle by George Wharton Pepper, a leader of the gentleman's party."

Both Parties Point to House Nebraska Race

April 9 Election
To Fill Seat Held
By Late Rep. Heinke

By Robert C. Albright

A local campaign in Nebraska's First District for a normally unimportant short-term House seat assumed national significance yesterday as Republican and Democratic campaign organizations spotlighted this special corn-belt election as a crucial 1940 voting barometer.

Dispatching G. O. P. oratorical aid to support the Republican entry, the Congressional Republican campaign committee sought in this Midwest farm district to confirm the G. O. P. voting trend established in Ohio and Iowa elections.

More hopeful of a Democratic victory than in recent vote tests, the Congressional Democratic campaign committee maintained equally close touch with the Nebraska campaign. Spokesmen said there is local Democratic speaking talent on the scene in abundance, but further aid would be supplied if requested.

G. O. P. Sending R. P. Short

The contest for this incomplete House term, that only has nine months to run, actually overshadowed the State Presidential preference primary and full term Senate and House primaries due to be decided on the same date—April 9. Republicans believed that if they could win here they could capitalize on a clean sweep of recent Midwest voting and bulwark their forecasts of a Republican-organized House in 1941. Democrats were just as determined to reverse the much-advertised G. O. P. "trend" and establish Nebraska as Democratic territory.

Celebrating the Ohio and Iowa victories at a dinner meeting Wednesday night, the Congressional Republican campaign committee decided to send Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri, silver-tongued former clergyman, on a speaking stump through the Nebraska district.

The prize is the House seat left vacant by the late Representative George Heinke (Republican), but formerly held by Democrats. Heinke defeated former Representative Luckey (Democrat) by only about 300 votes in the 1938 elections, but only after an independent candidate, Mrs. P. T. McGirr, cut heavily into Luckey's vote.

Dafoe Democratic Man

Republicans have entered J. Hyde Sweet, publisher of the Nebraska City News and Heinke's former secretary, to retain the seat in the G. O. P. column. Democrats are running Charles Dafoe, a former State Senator and prominently identified with State New Deal legislation.

National issues have figured prominently in their campaign. Following the G. O. P. opposition pattern, Sweet has stressed need for economy in Government, assailed bureaucratic trends and criticized the farm program as failing to come up to expectations. Dafoe has defended the farm program and the New Deal generally, as well as the implementing State legislation he had a hand in drafting.

Both parties regard the race as a clear-cut test of New Deal strength, and both candidates were expected to receive outside aid before the month is out.

Entered in the primary race for the long-term House seat in the same district is former Gov. Charles Bryan, brother of the late William Jennings Bryan. Three other Democrats are contesting the nomination. Eight Republicans seek the G. O. P. nomination for this seat, a fact national party spokesmen cite as evidence of increased Republican interest.

In Nebraska's Senatorial primaries Senator Burke seeks the Democratic nomination for re-election, against Gov. Cochran. While Cochran is running on a New Deal platform, the Administration has taken no hand in this contest. Seeking Nebraska's Republican Senatorial nomination on the same day are former Gov. Arthur J. Weaver and his Butler and William Jeffries, of Omaha. A draft-Roosevelt slate of delegates has been entered in the Presidential preference primaries. The State likewise is a primary battleground for the Republican Presidential hopes of Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, and Senator Vandenberg.

Meanwhile, the third-term pot bubbled merrily again at the Capitol and in California. Secretary of Interior Ickes, who went to California to straighten out a third-term factional row between Gov. Olson and former Senator McAdoo apparently succeeded in his mission in consolidating both behind a single slate of Roosevelt delegates. Two competing third-term slates had been threatened, but Associated Press dispatches reported agreement on a single slate, with both McAdoo and Olson represented.

Third-Term Debate in Senate

In the Senate, Senator Gerry (Democrat), of Rhode Island, sent to the desk and had read a resolution by the Rhode Island Legislature requesting Congress to enact legislation to prevent any President "from seeking a third term." Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, immediately attacked the resolution. Green pointed out that the Rhode Island Legislature is Republican and declared "only a minority of the House and a bare majority of the Senate voted for it." Green asked how Congress could prevent a President from seeking a third term and asked if it may not "some time become a President's duty—in the words of the poet Tennyson—"To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

Later in the day, Senator McKeel read to the Senate a letter from George Washington to Lafayette, saving Washington saw no reason for the Nation foregoing the services of any man found best fitted to serve in a national emergency. Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, of North Carolina, bitter third-term opponent, retorted that the Senate should not that Washington referred to an actual "national emergency" and to men "universally" deemed best fitted.

$30,000,000 Issue Planned By Giannini

Bank of America,
Treasury Agree
On Capital Increase

A program for rehabilitation of Bank of America, large Giannini-controlled San Francisco bank, has been worked out by the Treasury Department and agreed to by the bank, it was learned last night.

The arrangement follows a controversy between bank and Treasury officials which lasted over a period of years. During this time the Gianninis have accused Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau of persecuting them.

L. M. Giannini, president of the bank, announced in San Francisco last night, after an all-day meeting by the bank's board of directors, that the board had agreed to a 10-point program laid down by Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano.

$30,000,000 More Capital

Treasury officials declined to comment on the announcement. The main point in the program, it was learned, is an agreement by the Gianninis to increase the bank's capital by $30,000,000. This will be done either by sale of preferred or common stock, or both, by June 30 next.

The bank, Giannini said, then will have a capital of $80,000,000 and a $44,500,000 surplus.

An increase in capital previously had been opposed by the bank. Giannini said the new funds would be used to build up the bank's loan business, particularly installment loans.

Another feature of the arrangement is the creation of a committee to pass on the value of certain bank premises. Meanwhile, a reserve of $6,000,000 will be set up to cover any write-downs in value of these premises pending the report of the committee, which will consist of the vice president of the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank, the supervising examiner of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the chief national bank examiner for the Twelfth Federal Reserve District.

Giannini declared that the arrangement would not affect the dividend policy or the management of the bank.

"It was in the interest of both sides to have the differences satisfactorily disposed," he declared.

Practices to Be Changed

He said he had been in Washington for five weeks conferring with Delano and officials of the Federal Reserve Board. He returned from Washington early this week, he declared, with the ten conditions for rehabilitation of the bank laid down by the Comptroller's office.

The plan calls for changes in bookkeeping and bond accounts practices by the bank, it was disclosed.

The United Press said it was understood the bank would try to obtain by April 1 a loan from the

The bank agreed, the United Press said, to obtain additional security for contracts between the bank and California Lands, Inc. and Capital Co., and between the latter and the Merchants' National Realty Corporation.

Other Requirements

Other requirements were: Existing obligations of Transamerica Corporation with the bank will be eliminated by July 15, 1940, with no new loans.

Investments in stock under option are to be eliminated. Real estate holdings or loans are to be eliminated or corrected to conform to statutory requirements.

The bank will try to recover sums paid to Transamerica General Corporation in connection with certain losses.

Democratic Union Idea Is Traced To Greek League

The idea of a world union of democracies has its roots deep in history. Jacob G. Lyons, of the research department of the Library of Congress, said last night at a meeting of the Washington Association of Union Now at Friends Meeting House.

The world union of 15 democracies proposed a year ago by Clarence Streit in his book "Union Now" would follow closely along the lines of the Government of the United States, he said. Lyons traced the beginning of the movement to the League of Greek Slaves, started in 600 B. C., which presented a united front for 800 years.

James Spear, executive secretary of the Washington association, presided. Thomas K. Streit, manager of the association and brother of Clarence Streit, outlined the proposal.

FBI Treatment Of Prisoners Investigated

Inquiry Launched
Into Detroit Arrests
At Sen. Norris' Request

Attorney General Jackson announced yesterday he had begun an investigation of treatment by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of 16 persons arrested in Detroit for inducing the enlistment of volunteers for the Spanish Loyalist army.

This was done, he disclosed, as a result of information given him by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who previously had written him complaining of "inhuman and brutal" treatment of the Detroit prisoners.

It was revealed also that Jackson was considering abandonment of the practice of wire-tapping, which J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, said previously was resorted to "only in extraordinary situations and in an entirely legal manner."

The Supreme Court, in recent decisions, it was said, has made wire-tapping largely impracticable anyway. In these cases, the court ruled that it was a violation of the 1934 communications act to "divulge" evidence obtained in this manner.

Replying on March 1 to Norris' letter, Jackson said he had reviewed the facts in the Detroit cases so far as they were in his possession and found nothing to justify a charge of misconduct against the FBI.

Norris, however, had asked him to make a more detailed examination of the circumstances, and had furnished him with the information on which his complaint was predicated.

As a result, Jackson explained, Henry Schweinhaut, chief of the department's Civil Liberties Unit, has been designated to make a full inquiry.

Hoover, he declared, joined in Norris' request that the investigation be made.

The Detroit prisoners were arrested on order of former Attorney

General Murphy, now a Supreme Court member.

Simultaneously, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, arose to defend Hoover and his bureau on the floor of the Senate. He hailed Hoover as a "brave, efficient and honorable man," and shouted:

"He has put the fear of God into the hearts of all criminals in this country. With limited personnel he is efficiently handling 250 sabotage and espionage cases daily. He is one of the ablest officials in the Government."

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, added:

"If all the officials in this Government abstained from political activity as Mr. Hoover does, we would not need the Hatch clean politics bill. If there is an investigation of the FBI, I believe it will show no corruption, no violation of constitutional liberties."

2 Electrocutions Postponed Here

The electrocutions of Edward S. Bishop, 38, and James Bostic, 26, colored, for first degree murder, have been postponed to April 19 by Justice Peyton Gordon, of the District Court, because lunacy proceedings are pending.

Bishop was convicted of killing his wife in Pension Park 20 months ago. Bostic was convicted of killing a colored youth at North Capitol and L. streets northwest more than three years ago.

$650,000,000 Income Tax Yield Seen

March Figure Set
$100,000,000 Higher
By Treasury Experts

By the Associated Press
Treasury experts estimated unofficially yesterday that income tax yield for March would total $650,000,000 compared with $550,000,000 last March. Tonight at midnight is the annual deadline for filing returns and first-quarterly payments, but officials expected no accurate count of the proceeds for another week.

Since most citizens wait until the last minute to file tax returns, early collections have been meager. In the first 12 days of the month, collections reported to the Treasury amounted only to $81,475,743. This was a 50 per cent gain over the similar period last year, but was not regarded as a reliable indicator of the probable increase for the month as a whole.

Statistically, this year's estimated $650,000,000 individual and corporation returns will be of unusual interest because of various changes made last year in the income tax law. Particularly, Treasury officials want to see how much will be paid by State and local governmental employees, who have been made subject to the Federal levy for the first time. Early estimates were that these $2,600,000 persons would pay only about $16,000,000 a year. Many Treasury experts, however, look for this figure to be doubled or even tripled.

This is the first year since 1936 that corporations are free of the controversial undistributed profits tax. This tax was removed previously for corporations having less than $25,000 income, and tax rates for these small corporations are unchanged. But larger corporations, which were assessed 16 to 19 per cent depending on the amount of profits they distributed to stockholders, will pay instead a flat 18 per cent this year.

Numerous technical changes also were made in the corporation tax, including permission to balance one year's deficits against the next year's profits.

U. S. Income Tax Deadline Is Midnight

Maryland Returns
Also Must Be Made
Before Tomorrow

Midnight tonight is the dead line for filing Federal and Maryland State income taxes.

All Federal returns must be accompanied by at least the first quarterly payment. In Maryland full payment must be submitted.

Next comes the District. The new tax law here requires filing returns with at least half the annual payment by midnight April 15. In Virginia, the State returns must be filed by midnight, June 1, and the entire amount due must be paid on or before December 5.

Parks Rasin, chief of the tax collection division, Internal Revenue Department here, said that the bulk of the Federal returns will be made by mail to Baltimore. Today is a Federal pay day and an increase of taxpayers was expected at the collection office, Room 1002, Internal Revenue Building, Constitution avenue and Twelfth street northwest.

House Group Votes to Tax Income, Sales

2% Impost on Trade
To Begin in 1941;
1940 Levy Continues

1941 budget is $1,800,000 short of revenue, even if appropriations are kept down to the Budget Bureau recommendations.

The Nichols bill carries provision for credits on State income taxes, whereas the States have reciprocal clauses, but it appeared that the District might lose revenue in the exchange.

As explained by Nichols, non-residents or residents who have domiciles in a State will pay the District tax only if the local levy exceeds that due the State. Residents who earn part of their income in the States, on the other hand, will be given a deduction by the District in the same ratio as the outside earnings have to the District income.

United States Workers Escape
Because of the $10,000 primary exemption, however, all Government employees, whose domicile has caused all the confusion, will escape the income tax. The proportion of non-residents who may escape under the reciprocal clause will be small.

Representative Dirksen, jr., in announcing his intention to fight the Nichols bill, said that he had pointed out to the subcommittee that the present law could be amended so as to apply the tax to the incomes of all persons having an abode within the District and thereby avoid the domicile issue.

Courts Will Interpret
"The courts will interpret the law, however we write it," he said. "There is nothing very difficult about making the tax apply to persons who actually live here the year around."

Bates argued vainly for his solution of imposing the tax upon the income of non-residents earned within the National Capital.

The team of Dirksen and Bates was far from discouraged after yesterday's meeting. They recalled that the House went along with them last year and lowered the income tax proposed by the District Committee from $10,000 to $2,000. This base was later changed to $2,500 and $1,000 in the Senate. The full District Committee, moreover, refused to approve the sales tax.

Adding to the confusion yesterday was the mystery of the whereabouts of the Nichols bill. The

Greenbelt Man Goes to Jail Rather Than File Tax Report

H. E. Snyder Spends 3 Days in Lockup
Because He Feels City Doesn't Have Right
To Make Levies on Government Reservation

Harold E. Snyder, 43, of Greenbelt, Md., spent three days in the Hyattsville (Md.) lockup, it was revealed yesterday, because he refused to file a report on his personal property, subject to a tax under a town ordinance.

Snyder, a World War veteran and resident of the Government-owned town since February 15, 1938, was arrested by Greenbelt authorities last Friday, after he had repeatedly refused to comply with the ordinance. Firmly convinced the town council had no constitutional right to levy a personal property tax "because Greenbelt is a Government reservation," Snyder declined to post collateral of $50, preferring to remain in jail from Friday until Sunday, when friends bailed him out.

Snyder's case was continued until Monday, when he will be tried before Police Magistrate Alan Bowie at Hyattsville. Snyder said yesterday he had introduced it in the House and that printed copies would be available today, when the subcommittee is expected to approve it formally.

The House bill clerk, after the House had adjourned, stated that the measure had not been introduced. As the House will not meet again before the full District Committee holds its weekly meeting on Monday, there was some question as to whether the subcommittee can report the bill at that time.

Substratosphere Flights to Hawaii Planned by Line

Chicago, March 14 (P.)—Juan Terry Tripp, president of Pan American Airways, announced plans today for daily airplane service from the West Coast to Honolulu in land planes equipped to fly the substratosphere. He estimated the planes could make the trip in nine or nine and a half hours.

day he had retained a lawyer and hoped to carry his appeal to a higher court, if he were unsuccessful in the magistrate's court.

"If I win," he declared, "it will mean 800 families at Greenbelt will be benefited. You know taxation is getting to be a pretty bad thing. Every time you turn around, somebody wants a dollar for taxes."

Snyder is employed as a junior mechanic with the United States Weather Bureau. A native of Michigan, he moved to Greenbelt from the District.

"I pay my rent to the Federal Government, and the way I understand it, that is all that is necessary," he insisted.

Greenbelt authorities explained the rents paid by residents included real property taxes, but not taxes on automobiles and household furnishings. They said the town charter authorized the mayor and council to levy a tax to pay the cost of local government.

The ordinance, under which Snyder is charged, required reports on personal property to be filed by last September 15, officials said, providing for a fine of $5 to $25 for failing to comply. A tax of $1.15 per $100 was levied against all personal property assessed at more than $100.

Maurice Etzells Return to Capital From Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Leonard Etzells have returned from their wedding trip and are living at 5802 Sixteenth street, Arlington, Va. The bride is the former Miss Martha Ellen Cole, of Shawnee, Okla. She is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elmer James Cole and a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Tully J. Darden, of that city.

For the last four years she has been employed at the United States Public Health Service. Mr. Etzells, who is also employed at the United States Public Health Service, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Etzells, of Clarissa, Minn.

The wedding took place February 1 in the rectory of St. Malthe's Church. The Rev. Wilbur F. Wheeler officiated. Attended by Miss Alma Knabe as maid of honor, the bride wore blue moire tulle with matching accessories.

Offices Bill Cut $20,000,000 A Blow to Personnel Council

Some of Its Important Functions
Shifted to Civil Service Commission;
Conference Slashes Maritime Funds

The Council of Personnel Administration, charged with coordinating the current better-management program in Government offices, was dropped from the appropriations list yesterday as a joint Congressional conference chopped $20,000,000 from the independent offices bill.

The conference refused authorization for $25,040 for the personnel council, but officials said last night that some of its most important functions will be taken over by the Civil Service Commission. Its members who include personnel directors from the agencies and other Government officials will continue to meet and provide a clearing house for management plans.

Funds for continuing necessary research were understood to have been left in as part of the Civil Service Commission's allotment. The council, set up by the President early last year, had asked $50,000 in the budget to continue its study of methods for simplifying procedures in recruiting and training government employees.

Maritime Fund Slashed

Their budget request was left out by the House, and the $25,040 restored in the Senate would have come as an authorization for funds from the Civil Service Commission. The conference committee also retained the Senate's $710,000 fund for the National Resources Planning Board, restored after the House struck the entire $1,000,000 asked for the board in the budget.

As approved by the joint conference, the total appropriation for independent offices was cut $20,000,000 from the $138,803,522 approved by the Senate, with the heaviest slash in Maritime Commission funds. The compromise agreement returns to the Senate and then to the House for final approval.

The transfer of the council's personnel work to the Civil Service Commission was said to be in line with long-range plans of leaders in the drive for scientific personnel management.

The council has been seeking methods for stabilizing Government employment, while the Civil Service Commission for more than two years has been seeking funds to develop measures for the same purpose. Both agencies have been concerned with how to prevent losing valuable men already in the Government service, simply through failure to find the right man at the right time.

Plan Punch-Card System

The commission has made plans for a punch-card system, to be pushed into effect when funds are made available, which would make it possible to find in a short time a complete file of competent workers in the Government service to fill new vacancies.

Government workers from Kentucky will have to prove they're living in the District, and pay an income tax, or admit they are "domiciled" in the home State, and pay an income tax, according to a reminder from H. Clyde Reeves, State commissioner of revenue.

He sent up a circular stating flatly that "Federal employees working outside of Kentucky having a domicile within Kentucky are taxable under the Kentucky income tax law." Most of these, he said, are around Washington.

What they have to show, to escape the tax, is "clear and convincing evidence in the form of identifiable actions of such intention to establish a domicile in some other State or the District."

Kentucky's tax scales from 2 per cent for income to $3,000, to 5 per cent from more than $3,000, allows credits for Maryland and Virginia residents.

Muriel W. Brown, of Tulsa, Okla., has been appointed to the new post of consultant in family life education, in the Office of Education. She will work in developing State programs of education, and in home-making education for youth. She holds degrees from Wallesey and Johns Hopkins.

President Hits $412,000,000 Waterway Bill

Rivers and Harbors Conference Told Plan Is Unwise

The National Rivers and Harbors Congress received two messages from President Roosevelt yesterday.

One, which came direct, praised the organization's "excellent service" to the public in developing waterway improvements. The other, an indirect message, carried the news—that the President doesn't want Congress to spend money this session for development of the country's waterways.

The congress got the bad news from Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, at the very first session of its thirty-fifth annual convention in the Mayflower Hotel. Bailey, Senate Commerce Committee chairman, revealed that he and other committee members had learned of the President's stand during a conference at the White House Wednesday on bills to provide $412,000,000 for waterways and flood control.

The President, Bailey declared, "didn't say he would veto" the legislation, but he "certainly didn't pull any punches in letting us know that he thought it would be unwise."

Bailey gave it as his opinion that there is little likelihood of rivers and harbors appropriations this year.

A short time after he spoke, Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri, president of the congress, read to the gathering the other message—a letter of greeting from the President. The letter cited the world "emergency" as "an opportunity for serious thought as to the adequacy of all forms of transportation."

"In this connection," the letter added, "our waterways properly protected and improved are invaluable."

Other Senate delegates to the conference were Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, and Senator McNary, of Oregon, ranking Republican member of the committee. A delegation of House leaders to the White House also was told of Mr. Roosevelt's antipathy to the proposed expenditure.

"In the last 120 years we have spent something more than $3,000,000,000 on flood control and rivers and harbors," Bailey declared. "The money has been well spent, and the developments have been of inestimable value. But in the last ten years alone, we have spent $1,700,000,000 of that total."

Chester C. Thompson, president of the Inland Waterways Corporation, came to the defense of aims of the congress by stating he has never heard of it recommending an "unworthy project."

Attacks on two undertakings favored by President Roosevelt were other highlights of the session. William J. Driver, former Arkansas Representative and chairman of the congress' board of directors; Capt. C. Slack Barrett, president of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association, and Representative Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, joined in an attack on the Wheeler sea bill to place water transportation under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

At the same time, the Niagara Frontier Planning Board, of Buffalo, N. Y., assailed the proposed St. Lawrence waterway in a memorandum to delegates.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen welcomed delegates in behalf of the District. Other speakers included Rear Admiral Russell B. Waeche, commandant of the Coast Guard; Capt. G. S. Bryan, U. S. N.; T. M. Woodward, United States Maritime Commissioner; Col. Jarvis J. Bain, Beach Erosion Board; DeWitt Smith, national director of Red Cross disaster relief.

Citizens Ask Hearing

Spokesmen for 24 citizens organizations have asked for time this afternoon when the House subcommittee on District appropriations holds its final hearing on the 1941 District supply bill.

Chairman Millard Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, said the hearing will start at 1:30 p. m. and continue until all witnesses are heard. In the morning the subcommittee will complete the hearing of municipal officials.

With only four days devoted to the executive hearings, the House subcommittee has set a new record in speed in the handling of the District budget by a Congressional committee. The bill will be marked up next week.

Final hearings on the requests for additional appropriations for local welfare institutions will be held this morning. Members of the subcommittee have indicated, however, that appropriations in general will be kept close to the estimates recommended by the Budget Bureau.

North Randle Community

The North Randle Community Citizens Association endorsed Maj. Ernest W. Brown's proposal that combination licenses for the sale of packaged liquor and other merchandise in the same store be abolished, as suggested by the police superintendent before the House Liquor Investigation subcommittee last week.

A. C. Edwards, president of the association, was instructed to appear before the House Appropriations subcommittee today to testify on the need for a modern school building to replace the portable school at Minnesota avenue and E streets southeast, in which the association meets.

The association voted a protest to the District Commissioners over the failure of the Public Assistance Division to grant relief in two cases on which reports were heard. Letters were ordered written to the Zoning and Fine Arts Commission to inquire whether junk yards could be centralized in a particular place to remove unsightly dumps.

W. I. U. C. Committee

The Washington Industrial Union Council's executive committee last night affirmed its position in favor of the District of Columbia income tax. The group at the same time voted to oppose any form of sales tax for the District.

Dies Reports Link to OGPU In Officialdom

Will Question Leader Of Soviet Activities In U. S., He Says

By the Associated Press
Hinting that unnamed "people in government circles" were involved, Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday that his committee on un-American activities had uncovered a "lead" on far-flung Soviet police operations in the United States and would hear testimony soon from "the head of the OGPU" in this country.

The Texan, who cut short a Florida vacation to return here and arrange for the inquiry, declined to give out the witness' name or tell how the committee got in touch with him. It was indicated the alleged Russian agent had been arrested by the FBI in connection with its investigation of espionage.

(Before Dies left Florida, the Miami Herald said it had learned an important Russian spy had been arrested near Washington and had given officers a full account of how numerous Russian secret police had been smuggled into this country by way of Cuba.)

Definite arrangements for the hearing, Dies indicated, will be made at a meeting of his committee next week.

"The purpose of this," he said, "is to expose the manner in which the OGPU (Russian secret police) operates in the United States."

He said he expected the witness would "give the picture" for this country of spy operations similar to those described to the committee last year by Gen. Walter G. Krivitsky, who told the committee that he was a former Soviet secret police chief for Western Europe.

Krivitsky related that Russia had a net of spies and secret police throughout Europe. These agents, he declared, not only conducted espionage, but had, on occasion, kidnapped and slain persons considered anti-Stalinists.

Although professing not to have detailed knowledge concerning this country, Krivitsky said that Moscow "undoubtedly" had many agents in the United States, some even in the Army and Navy.

Dies said that he had checked on reports of Communist and Fascist activity in Florida.

Delta Gamma Alumnae Plan Founders' Day

The Delta Gamma Alumnae of Washington will have their annual founders' day banquet Saturday night at the Kennedy Warren, at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Raleigh Dawson, the chairman, will be assisted by Miss Janet Brown, Mrs. W. R. Burt, Mrs. Gerald Flood, Miss Maurine Gatewood, Miss Ellen Hopkins, Mrs. John Leavitt, Mrs. H. S. McDonald, Mrs. Richard Titlow, Mrs. Clifford Webb, Mrs. Eric Wendelin, Mrs. Thomas Bowling and Mrs. O. K. Yeager.

The theme of the program is "Down the Decade With Delta Gamma," dating from the founding in 1874 to the future represented by the active chapter at American University. Mrs. Flood is in charge of the program and Miss Maxwell Galloway in charge of the music. Those taking part with skits, dancing, singing and reading include Miss Hazel Kirk, Miss Helen Palmer, Mrs. Ray Awtrey, Mrs. Alton Hollister, Mrs. Samuel Bogley, Miss Maurine Gatewood, Mrs. R. C. Nicholson, Jr., Mrs. Harold Hishman, Miss Kathryn Ingberg, Miss Margaret Moses, Miss Ethel Whitlow, Mrs. Hazel Yeager, Mrs. James Bowen and a vocal trio. Reservations may be made through Mrs. John Leavitt.

Legless Girl Carries Plea to Congress

Twenty-two-year-old Martha Geesling, who lost both legs as the result of an accident, left Emergency Hospital yesterday and with the assistance of The Post appeared before the House subcommittee on District Appropriations. She pleaded for Washington's handicapped children by asking members of grant money to continue the WPA visiting teachers project.

A plea for a balanced budget was made by L. A. Carruthers, past president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, while Harry S. Wender, vice president, asked for 100 additional policemen, 15 more firemen, an inebriate farm and a radio-equipped dog wagon with additional catchers.

Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, of the federation's welfare committee, asked that the administrative expense limitation on public assistance be raised from 10 to 12 per cent, and Walter Wasson, of the educational committee, made a plea for a new Wilson's Teachers College and a larger fund for school repairs.

Hits School Fund Cut

Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, asked that the original school estimates of the board of education be restored, that the board be given control of school repairs, and that 15 firemen be restored to the department.

A. C. Edwards, president of the North Randall Community Citizens Association, testified on the need for a modern school building to replace the portable school at Minnesota avenue and E street southeast.

This school's condition made news last month when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt received a letter from children attending it, asking that they be given a new "warm, comfortable" school.

In this connection, Harry W. F. Glemser, former vice president of the North Randall Highlands Community Citizens Association, last night pointed out that The Post February 8 had erroneously listed him as president of the association in its report of the school's condition. Glemser also denied that he had said, as reported, that description of the school's condition was "slightly exaggerated" in the letter to Mrs. Roosevelt—Editor's note.

Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, asked for a three-year residential requirement for charitable municipal hospital aid or relief and that new policemen and firemen be covered by the general District civil service system so that the separate police and firemen's retirement fund may be abolished eventually. The latter, he said, will save the District considerable money.

Others Ask More Funds

Washington I. Cleveland, of the District Motor Club, urged an extension of the driver training program in public schools and asked that the motorcycle police corps be increased from 60 to 100.

A plea for larger appropriations for maintenance of the traffic light system was made by George E. Kenelpp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club.

Among other witnesses heard were:

T. Kelley Back, for Lafayette School; Mrs. Olive Swinney, for public assistance and child welfare; H. L. Coleman, a new elementary school for University Park; Dorsey Hyde, on Georgetown school needs; J. L. Gelman, of the Anacostia Junior High School P-T. A.; Sidney R. Katz, of the Maryland-District Industrial Union Council.

Mrs. A. D. Henry, Jackson School P-T. A.; Mrs. Francis Walters and Mrs. J. R. Lyddane, on school gardens; George M. Gooch, Wilson Teachers' College; Capt. J. L. Werheim, Fire Department; Dr. C. T. Ferebee, on health center; Mrs. Lester Buchanan, welfare needs; Genevieve Michaux, Dr. Robert Kassin and Mrs. Myrtle Larson, handicapped children; Mrs. Basil Manly, Gallinger Hospital; E. J. Read, Southeast Citizens Association; schools; Henry Austin, Bradbury Heights Citizens Association; the Rev. Harry Porter, District Health Forum; Charles I. Stengle, American Federation of Government Employees; A. J. Brylawski, of the Traffic Council; Mrs. Towney Brown, Widows and Orphans Protective League, and Philip Bonosky, City Council of District Workers Alliance.

stock as a step toward "socialized credit."

Bill Intended to 'Improve' System

Jones replied that his bill is intended to "improve and preserve" the farm credit system. "Even at the present low interest rates, too many loans are in default," he said.

"The Government has never let the Land Bank bonds go unpaid," he pointed out. "It never will do so. Then why not guarantee them in the first place and give the farmer the benefit of the reduced rate of interest?"

"In spite of criticism by anyone," Jones concluded, "we expect to continue to work for the lowest practical interest rates and for maintaining and operating the system on a sound basis."

Green will leave Washington in September to become president of the Colorado State Agricultural College. Departure of Green, it was suggested here last night, will give the President an opportunity to appoint an advocate of liberalized lending policies at a time when Congress is not in session. The Land Bank commissioner appointment must be ratified by the Senate. Green is regarded as an opponent of the "soft credit" policies denounced by Goss in his resignation statement.

Goss Resisted 'Political Pressure'

Taber said the "dismissal" of Goss came as "a shock to the friends of organized agriculture." Goss, he declared, consistently resisted "political pressure" and sought "to develop a sound and constructive farm loan system, cooperative in character and capable of rendering the largest possible service to the farmer borrower."

Green, who is 51, served as manager of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and as general agent for the FCA Ninth District, with headquarters in Wichita, Kan., before becoming a deputy governor of the FCA. He is considered an authority on crop insurance.

Another appointment announced yesterday by President Roosevelt advances Carl R. Arnold from deputy credit commissioner to commissioner. A specialist in farm management problems, Arnold has been deputy commissioner since 1933. He succeeds S. M. Garwood, who resigned as commissioner September 7.

Hearings on the farm credit revision bill continued yesterday in the House Agriculture Committee. William M. Thatcher, representing the National Farmers Union, was questioned for more than an hour.

gress might "turn off the spigot" for new funds to support farm credit. He cited the HOLC as an example. Thatcher said he did not believe the land banks, in operation for 23 years, could be compared to the emergency program of the HOLC.

Representative Hope (Republican), of Kansas, said the aim of the bill appeared to be to save the farmers' homes, while Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, asked whether the bill would not undermine the business principles which make the farm-credit system a sound institution.

"It's more important to protect the farmer than it is to protect a credit system," Thatcher asserted. He declared "it would take a lot of imagination" to regard the present system as cooperative.

"FAMOUS ORCHESTRA LEADER"

GEORGE JESSEL, beloved comedian of stage and radio, made the same kind of comparison as Al Donahue, John B. Kennedy and many other celebrities. "I consider your present 7 Crown," said Mr. Jessel, "an even smoother and finer drink than the wonderful whiskey you made five years ago."

WHEN AL DONAHUE, musical maestro, compared Seagram's Crown Whiskies blended today with those blended in 1934 (the identical whiskeys that became America's biggest sellers within ninety days after their introduction in July 1934), the famous orchestra leader said: "It doesn't take an expert to taste the difference. Your present Crowns are much milder and smoother."

JOHN B. KENNEDY, dynamic radio editorialist, tasted 1934 Seagram's 5 Crown and today's 5 Crown (Seagram's all-purpose whiskey). Said commentator Kennedy: "I heartily agree with all the well-known people who have made the same comparison as I have... your present Seagram's is much smoother."

S.S.S. Tonic must be good

So many people take it—to increase appetite—to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them. The facts are simple because of all conditions affecting the human body a low blood count is most deceptive. If you feel rundown... lack a keen appetite... have lost weight... don't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again.

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways... first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Try S.S.S. which any drug store can supply and no ethical dealer will suggest a substitute. The big 20 oz. size is a two week's treatment and represents a saving in the purchase price of S.S.S. Co.

Scandinavians Ready to Seek Defense Pact

Sweden and Norway Prepared to Meet Finland on Terms

By Harold Callender
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, March 14.—Amid the still heavy gloom which hung over Scandinavia today some saw a glimmer of hope in the renewed vision of a reconstructed Scandinavian solidarity, taking the realistic form of a mutual defense pact backed by staff talks on the model of the great powers. This vision was born of the Baltic disaster of Tuesday's Russo-Finnish peace.

It would involve a complete revolution in Scandinavian policy through abandonment of its exclusively peaceful traditions and its adaptation to the rude and violent world in which small nations must try to live today.

The International News Service reported from Helsinki that an official announcement had been made there that Finland, Sweden and Norway have formally agreed to "resume negotiations for their mutual security."

Sweden, Norway Ready

On Tuesday, before signing the Russian terms, the Finnish government asked Sweden and Norway categorically if they were prepared to consider such a pact. The answer from both was yes. This brought the question into the field of urgent practical policy. Hence the allusion of Christian E. Guenther, the Swedish foreign minister, to the linked destinies of the northern states and the need for a more definite collaboration. The Socialist parliamentary group discussed the pact today, most newspapers came out in favor of it, and the possibility of a national referendum was considered.

It is notable that the reaction in Scandinavia to this Baltic "Munich" is strikingly similar to the reaction in Britain and France to the Munich agreement of 1938. Here, too, there is a brave effort to pick up the pieces and start rebuilding and perhaps to lock the door after the horse has been stolen. There is the same rueful heart searching and recrimination, the same determination to do better and be stronger the next time—but incomparably greater misgivings about success.

Suspicious of Allies

The experts here say that article three of the treaty, which forbids Finland entering an alliance hostile to Russia, does not exclude the mutual defense pact contemplated. But the question is, would Russia take that view and what would Germany say? Germany vetoed greater Swedish help to Finland during the war and might veto the proposed pact.

The Allies might be pleased to see Scandinavia rouse herself and unite, but many here are suspicious of the Chamberlain government as well as of Russia and Germany. Sweden's recent policy was dictated not only by fear of Germany, but by doubt of the speed and effectiveness of Allied help. This doubt is one of the consequences of Munich.

Daladier Confers With His Critics

The Senate and had done so just because of the profound impression produced in Parliament and the country by the peace terms imposed on Finland.

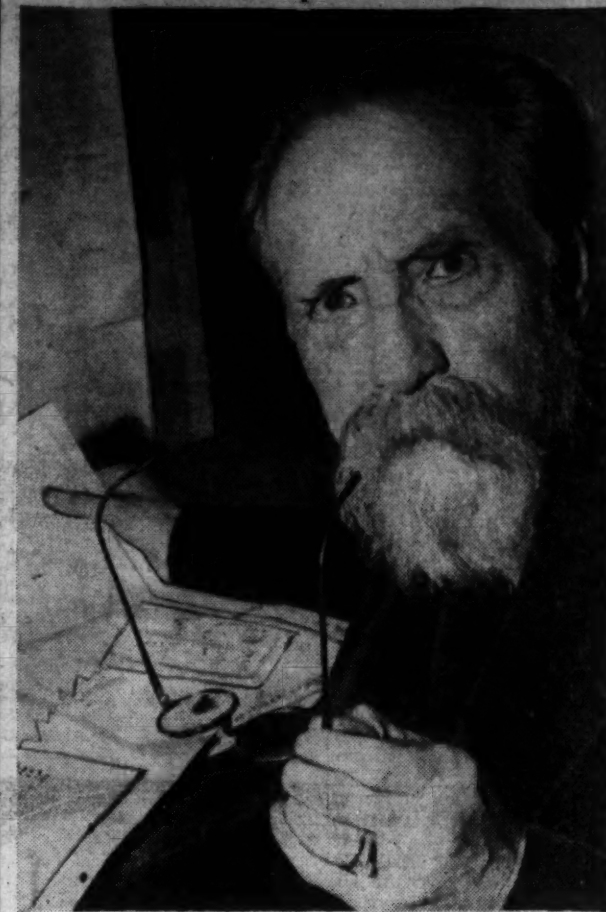

Would Fix Responsibility

"I consider," he said, "that it is in the interest not only of the government but of the country not to allow matters to drift but to meet them immediately and fix every one's responsibility. That is why I am asking for the immediate discussion not only of the Finnish question but of the general policy and the war policy of the government. If there is any criticism to be made, let it be made now so that, without any delay, the situation may be restored if it appears that it has been in any way affected. It is not only Finland which is involved, the whole conduct of the war must be discussed so that we shall know what the government and the two houses of Parliament want."

Applause indicated the premier had recovered the ground lost under Laval's attack.

The Senate decided to sit in secret. The session lasted for over three hours and will be resumed tomorrow morning.

Polish Weather Expert Here

His home, laboratory and invaluable records presumably lost in the war, Dr. Henryk Arctowski, one of Poland's leading scientists, is starting a monumental job at the Smithsonian Institution. He will seek to determine direct effects of changes in the sun's radiation on weather conditions on earth. Dr. Arctowski's earliest meteorological observations began when he was a young geologist on the Antarctic exploring ship, Belgica, in 1897-1899.

100,000 Finns Forsake Homes from the regions north of Lake Ladoga, since the ceded Karelian Isthmus was emptied of civilians and turned over to the army almost completely during the war.

Only 2,000 persons are remaining in Hanko, the south coast port leased to Russia as a naval base.

The state has been paying the entire cost of feeding and sheltering refugees and now will stand the cost of moving them to permanent homes.

Koivisto said that an effort would be made to keep friends and neighbors with common traditions and customs together, but that "very grave social problems" are ahead. The psychological shock of moving persons from places where their families had dwelt for generations is extremely serious, he pointed out.

The Finnish government feels that the refugees have a right to expect new property and new homes to make up for what is lost to Russia.

Some of the farming population from the isthmus and north of Lake Ladoga will be moved to western Finland near Vaasa. Fishers of the Gulf of Bothnia, in southwest Finland, where they can follow their accustomed ways.

Retreat 4 Miles a Day
From its shell-scarred positions on the isthmus and north of Ladoga the Finnish army must retreat at a rate of about 4 miles a day, starting tomorrow and completing the cession by April 10. Each sector has a deadline for being yielded.

The need for every transport vehicle is so acute that the government declines to let newspapers visit the area for the present.

Informed Helsinki circles said they saw nothing in article 3 of the Moscow peace treaty which would prohibit a defensive alliance with Sweden and Norway as urged today by President Kusti Kallio in a broadcast speech. The article pledges that no alliances directed against one signatory may be entered into by the other.

These Helsinki circles said a Scandinavian defense alliance could not be interpreted as directed against Russia any more than any other power.

Welles Returns To Italy Today, May See Pope

Reception Friendlier Than on First Visit Forecast for Envoy

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 14.—Undersecretary of State Welles returns to Rome tomorrow evening, and all signs point to a friendlier and more receptive atmosphere than he found when he first arrived from Washington. The Italians clearly feel more trustful and more disposed to speak, since they know that the Undersecretary goes straight back home from here.

No set program has been announced, and the only certainties are Welles will see Premier Mussolini and Count Ciano, the foreign minister, again and will leave some time Monday for Naples, sailing on the Conte di Savoia Tuesday.

It is quite probable that Welles will see the Pope this time. He was expected to on his last visit, but there was apparently some misunderstanding at the Vatican. Now, American circles have let it be known if the Pontiff desires to see the President's envoy, Welles gladly will pay the visit. It was made clear some weeks ago that the Pope would like to talk to Welles.

The Undersecretary will have more time at his disposal on this visit, and it is expected he will see other Italian leaders in addition to the Duce and Count Ciano. He followed a similar procedure in the other capitals, and it is believed he has more information out of men like Field Marshal Goering and Paul Reynaud, the French finance minister, than he did out of their chiefs.

The Italians are sending a private railway car to Turin to meet the Paris train. The semi-official Informazione del Giorno writes that there is intense interest here in the visit, which will have "an even greater importance than the first visit." The agency feels that the delicacy and gravity of the moment, added to the fact that the Russo-Finnish war had ended since Welles was here last, will give the conversations with the Duce more weight.

"Whatever the difficulties against which every peaceful effort of Europe is struggling," it concludes, "one should not ignore the moral value or the utility of the activity with which Mr. Welles has been charged even if it has been merely informative in scope."

Sees Daladier Again

Copyright by New York Times
Paris, March 14.—Sumner Welles had another interview with Premier Daladier on his return from London homebound via Rome. Welles handed him a personal message of greeting from President Roosevelt similar to that which he handed to Premier Mussolini on his arrival in Rome.

This message, it was understood, was more or less a formal presentation of his envoy by the President to which was attached a short account of his mission and a personal greeting. It is notable that in each of Welles' recent visits, reception there no mention was made of any such message having been presented to Hitler.

During his few hours here, Welles had courtly interviews with the British and Italian ambassadors.

Va. Plea to Cut Tobacco Taxes

Representative Burch (Democrat), Virginia, said yesterday he had laid before the House Ways and Means Committee resolutions of the Virginia Legislature and other data in support of his bill (HR 8838) to reduce taxes on manufactured tobacco.

The bill would cut taxes on snuff, chewing and smoking tobacco from 18 to 12 cents a pound, on cigarettes weighing not more than three pounds per thousand from $7.20 to $4.80. Cigar taxes would not be changed.

Increased consumption as a result of the tax reduction, Burch predicted, would offset any reduction in revenue.

Furthermore, he contended, the taxes affected were increased when the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect and now that prohibition had been repealed and liquor taxes re-imposed, the old tobacco tax figures should be restored.

Oslo Reveals Nazi Threat To Finnish Aid

Germany Warned She'd Intervene Against Allied Army

Oslo, March 14.—Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht declared in a broadcast tonight that Norway and Sweden had refused a last minute formal request of Britain and France to send troops through Scandinavia to Finland's aid because it was learned Germany would intervene.

The Norwegian foreign minister said the French and British issued feelers as early as March 2, but made no official request for passage of their troops until March 12, a few hours before Finland announced she had signed a peace with Russia.

Norway and Sweden refused the first suggestion of the Allies on March 4 because of fear that if Germany tried to intercept the Allied forces, Scandinavia would become a theater of war.

100,000 Ready Too Late
One hundred thousand French and British troops would have been necessary to give Finland effective help, Koht declared, but would have taken so long to transport with their supplies that the effort would have been of no avail.

Finland made her first formal request for passage of Allied aid on March 11, he added, and Norway and Sweden rejected it March 12, the same day the British and French requests were submitted. The formal Allied request "came too late," Koht said, and their criticism of Norway and Sweden was "unjust."

It is remarkable that "criticism comes from those who have done less for Finland than we," he added. Rancor over the Altmarek exchanges—when British sailors raided the German ship Altmarek in a Norwegian fjord and liberated British captives—was revived when the foreign minister denied British and French charges that Norway was letting German submarines operate in Norwegian waters, or that Norway was transshipping imports to Germany.

"All accusations in this respect are untrue, and we are forced to ask what is the intention in making them," Koht declared. "Only I can create them."

Swedish air that is being transshipped to Germany, he said, is specifically allowed by the British-Norwegian trade agreement.

Allies Split on Aid

Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier and the French general staff are said to have differed, probably for technical transport reasons, over sending official Franco-British aid to Finland, and the plan was dropped at a meeting of the Allied war council in Paris on February 6. This information was contained in reports to this Government at the time, and was repeated here yesterday.

The French had one Polish and one French division ready to depart for Finland at a moment's notice and proposed in the Paris conference attended by Chamberlain that the British supply one Canadian division. The French urged that these troops, with full equipment, be sent to Finland, via Sweden if possible, but if not that the expedition be conveyed by the British navy to northern Finland or Russia, to create a diversion.

Mr. Chamberlain, according to diplomatic reports, asked for several days to think over the matter and, after consultations in London, informed the French he was opposed to such direct intervention. The basis upon which he made this decision is not known, but is presumed to have been factors of geography and Scandinavian neutrality.

As a substitute, it was agreed that volunteers be encouraged to go from England and France to Finland and that further airplanes and military supplies be sent as rapidly as possible. Meanwhile the French continued to hold their specially prepared divisions in readiness and Daladier made reference to part of the proposed expeditionary force in a speech just before Soviet-Finnish peace was formally announced.

It may be noted that Washington's information was obtained as the events developed and does not represent an attempt to piece the facts together after the Russo-Finnish struggle ended.

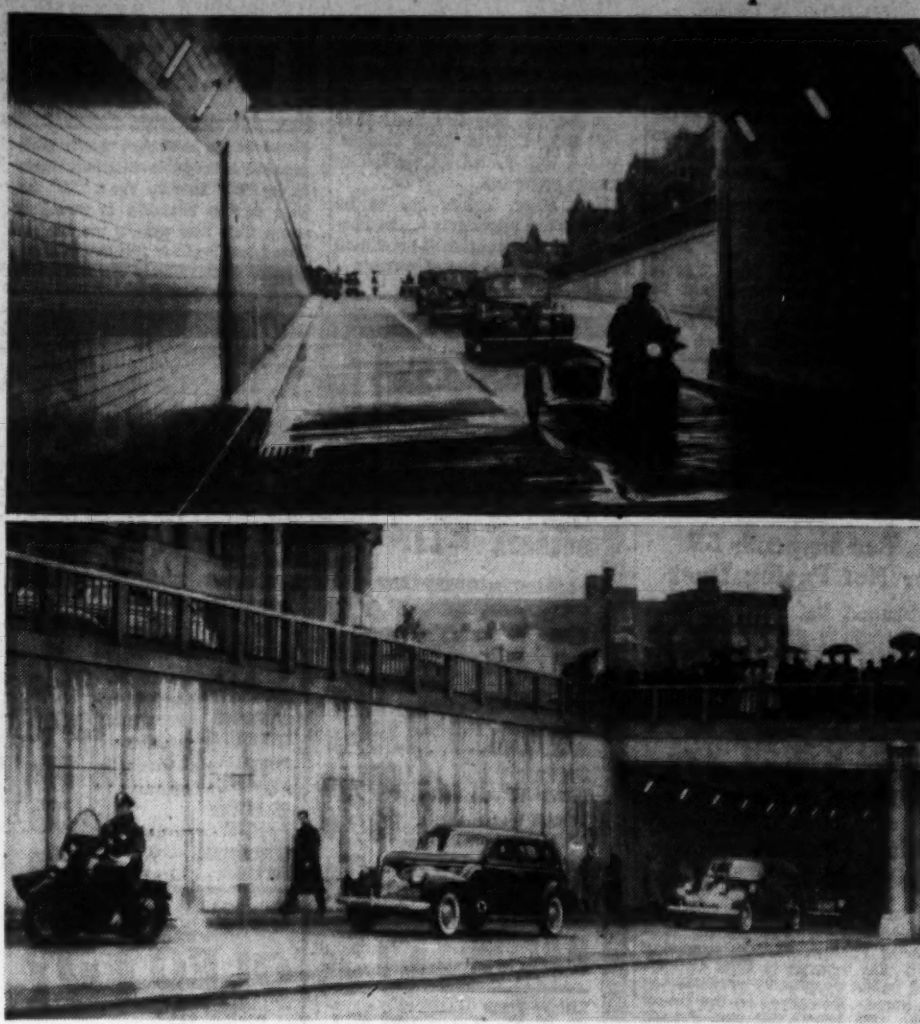

As a matter of fact, Washington knew that the Allied war council was meeting on February 6 for the purpose of arranging aid to Finland and it was presumed here that official Anglo-French aid would be sent to Finland and that all remaining to be decided in Paris was the amount and form of direct aid.

It came as a surprise in official circles here that the troops were not dispatched and it was not until two weeks after the early February meeting that officials were able to get information as to why this had not been done.

There is no particular disposition here to criticize Chamberlain for his stand since the considerations of broader policies as well as technical difficulties, which determined it, are not definitely known. Sweden formally announced that it would not permit the passage of regular army units to aid Finland and it was known here that Russia had mined the Murmansk area and set up heavy shore batteries in the Petsamo region.

How To Relieve Misery of Your Chest
Massage throat, chest, and back with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with a warm cloth.
VapoRub's double action brings double relief. It acts as a poultice to penetrate the surface skin; and its soothing medicinal vapors are breathed direct to the irritated air passages.
Try it, to loosen phlegm—to clear air passages—check tendency to cough—and also to relieve the tightness and soreness of chest muscles.

Rain and Traffic Christen the Underpass

The rains and thousands of vehicles christened the new underpass at Thomas Circle. Motor-cycle police in tarpaulins and officials in rain coats rode through and all went well. Then the curious drove down to try it. Driving slowly through the downpour, they merged with the afternoon rush-hour traffic. What followed was called, in official quarters, a "serious traffic jam." The cops, who with water dripping from their caps, had to straighten it out, called it something different.

Finn Cables Hoover for Relief Of Refugees From Lost Lands

Copyright by New York Times

New York, March 14.—An acute need of even more help for Finnish refugees from the areas now relinquished to Russia was stressed in a cablegram received today by Herbert Hoover from Almo K. Cajander, former prime minister and present head of the civilian relief committee of Finland.

"Assistance from the Finnish relief fund is more imperative than before," Cajander cabled, "as the number of those evacuated has increased. Misery is great both among the families of those killed in battle or air raids and among the army of evacuated children. Having defended her independence and neutrality, Finland, after a persistent fight as an outpost of Western civilization and ideals of justice, has been compelled to conclude a hard peace. I appeal to you for continued help." The Hoover drive is being speeded up all over the country, it was stated at national headquarters.

Aid Continues

Red Cross aid to Finland will be continued until conditions are nearer to normal, Chairman Norman H. Davis said yesterday in announcing two new shipments of relief supplies. Davis said he was told in a transatlantic telephone conversation with Dr. H. A. Spencer, of the United States Public Health Service, representing the Red Cross in Finland, that more than 200,000 Finns will require help in establishing new homes. These, he said, were residents of the territory taken over by Soviet Russia.

125 Audits Completed

Richmond, Va., March 14 (AP).—Stage Auditor L. McCarthy Downs said today his staff completed audits of 125 State and local governmental units during the last 60 days. They included accounts of sheriffs, trial justices, clerks of courts, county treasurers, county boards of public welfare and several towns.

Soviet Agent Pleads Guilty, Is Fined $500

Jacob Ralsin, a chunky, red-haired, 48-year-old tourist agency operator, pleaded guilty in the District Court yesterday to failing to register with the State Department as a propagandist agent of Intourist, the Soviet state travel bureau. Ralsin's company, World Tourists, Inc., also pleaded guilty to the same charge.

Justice Peyton Gordon fined Ralsin $500 and sentenced him to serve 4 to 12 months in jail, but immediately probated the sentence. Ralsin paid the $500 in cash. Justice Gordon fined World Tourists $500 and suspended the fine.

Ralsin and his company were indicted Wednesday by the extraordinary grand jury which has been investigating activities of alien agents here for the last eight weeks. Special Assistant Attorneys General Henry G. O'Donnell and Floyd M. Rett, who are directing the investigation, recommended probation of the jail sentence.

Sol H. Cohn, New York attorney, appeared for the defendants and pleaded for light sentences, pointing out that Ralsin came before the court as soon as he was indicted and pleaded guilty, without resisting removal or adopting other courses that might have been open to him.

Ralsin said before the hearing that he had been in the tourist business 13 years and was a naturalized American citizen.

South Wins New Victory On Rail Rates

I.C.C. Refuses, 5 to 4, To Reopen Hearing On Reductions

By the Associated Press
The South won another freight rate victory yesterday when the Interstate Commerce Commission refused to reconsider a November decision granting long-sought reductions on a list of South-North rates. By a 5-to-4 division, the same as on the original proceeding, the commission rejected a plea of Northern railroads to reopen the case.

At the same time, the prescribed rate reductions were ordered put into effect by June 1. In effect, the November decision upheld the South's longstanding complaint against "discriminatory" rates, ordering reductions ranging from 5 to 35 per cent on a list of 18 North-bound manufactured articles.

More Suits Expected
Because it established the principle of sectional "parity" of rates, Southerners hailed it as the entering wedge for many other rate reductions. Southern politicians and economists contended an unfavorable schedule of rates to North-eastern markets had retarded industrialization of the cotton country.

It was generally believed the success of the first case, brought by the Southern Governors' Conference, presaged early filing of additional proceedings. Nevertheless, counsel for the defendant railroads have hinted they will take the case to the Federal courts.

Commodities involved in the case included stoves, stone of various kinds, cast iron and brass pipe fittings, fire hydrants, iron and brass valves and soapstone and talc.

Vote of Commission
On these items, the commission ordered rates from the South to the North on a basis approximating that which would apply to the same commodities within the North.

It was said existing South-North rates on these commodities were about 37 per cent higher than the all-North level.

In today's decision, those against reopening the case were Commissioners William E. Lee, who wrote the opinion; Clyde B. Atchison, Walter M. W. Spawen, Marion M. Caskie and John L. Rogers.

Voting for reargument were Chairman Joseph B. Eastman and Commissioners Claude R. Porter, Charles D. Mahaffie and Carroll Miller.

Commissioners J. Haden Allredge and William J. Patterson, who became members after the Southern hearing was under way, did not participate.

Grand Jury Tours FBI Headquarters

The 20 men and 3 women members of the District grand jury yesterday afternoon toured the Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters at the Department of Justice. Special agents demonstrated laboratory processes.

The grand jury adjourned for the trip at noon, after hearing District Attorney David A. Pine and John J. Wilson, chief of the criminal division, question several witnesses in connection with an investigation of spurious letters purporting to link Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, with the Silver Shirt organization headed by William Dudley Pelley. Further testimony in the case will be heard today.

Engineering Awards Up 10% in Week
New York, March 14 (AP)—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday totaled $43,308,000, a 10 per cent increase over the previous week, but 7 per cent less than the same week a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Public construction contracts topped the previous week by 17 per cent, but were 1 per cent lower than a year ago. Private awards were 1 per cent smaller than a week ago and 18 per cent less than the corresponding week of 1939.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!
An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to keep regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

It's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

K. of C. Installs Plaque to Its War Dead

Ceremonies Held In Arlington Cemetery For 5,000 Victims

A plaque "in the name of 5,000 Knights of Columbus," dedicated "To the Undying Memory of All Who Served God and Country in the World War," was installed yesterday in the trophy room of the Amphitheater at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in Arlington National Cemetery.

Supreme Knight Francis P. Matthews of Omaha, Neb., presented the plaque. It was received in the name of the United States Government by Wallace Lynn, architect at the cemetery. "The presentation is appropriate at this time when the Knights of Columbus are pledging themselves to world peace," Matthews declared.

The Rev. Joseph A. Gedra, assistant pastor at Immaculate Conception Church, delivered the invocation. Attending were Supreme Treasurer Daniel J. Callahan, Supreme Advocate Luke E. Hart, of St. Louis; the State deputy of Maryland, John A. Flanagan, of Baltimore; the State deputy of Virginia, Lawrence W. Corbett, of Alexandria; the State deputy of the District of Columbia, Dr. W. Victor Macomber, of New York; and a large delegation of local members of the order.

U. S. Accepts Part in Bank For Americas

Ready to Sign Accord, Hull Tells Advisory Committee

The United States Government stated its willingness yesterday to sign a proposed convention establishing a $100,000,000 inter-American bank for the promotion of trade and financial stability in the Western Hemisphere.

Secretary of State Hull said the United States is prepared to sign on April 14, which is Pan-American Day.

His letter was addressed to the chairman of the inter-American financial and economic advisory committee, at the Pan American Union, the secretary is Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, who was elected to the inter-American position by the representatives of the American republics.

Hull wrote that the establishment of the bank "would be a step of major importance in the development of inter-American financial and economic cooperation. Thus far the United States, Mexico and Colombia have signed their intention of signing. The instrument will be deposited in the Pan American Union for signature by the governments of the American republics on April 14 and the day after."

Shares having a valuation of $100,000 each will be issued. The preliminary agreement by the advisory committee calls for the United States, Brazil and Argentina to take a minimum of 50 shares each, Mexico and Venezuela each 35, Chile, Colombia and Cuba, 30, Peru, 25; Uruguay, 20; Bolivia, 15; the Dominican Republic and Panama, 10; Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua and Paraguay, 5.

The bank is designed to foster cooperative action in agriculture, industry, public utilities, mining, commerce and transportation. It will seek to promote the use and distribution of gold and silver and facilitate the transfer of international payments.

Southerners Call At White House On Rural Housing

Governors and other officials from Southern States called on President Roosevelt today to enjoin his support for a rural housing program. George B. Hamilton, State treasurer of Georgia and chairman of a new Southern steering committee for rural housing, said the group was backing a bill, already passed by the Senate and pending before the House Banking Committee, to authorize an $800,000,000 housing program, with $200,000,000 earmarked for rural housing.

The delegation included Governors Maybank, of South Carolina; Bailey, of Arkansas, and Price, of Virginia; Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, of the House Banking Committee; Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia; Edgar Brown, South Carolina State Senator; Roy Jones, South Carolina agricultural commissioner; and Roy Edwards, chairman of the Jacksonville, Fla., Housing Authority.

Cotton Exports Are Highest Since 1933

Demand Expected To Exceed 1939 Crop By 2 Million Bales

By the Associated Press
With cotton exports at the highest level since 1933, Federal farm officials predicted yesterday that this season's demand would exceed the 1939 crop by upward of 2,000,000 bales.

Requirements in excess of last year's crop will be drawn from a record surplus of about 14,000,000 bales on hand at the beginning of the current marketing season. The bulk of the surplus is stored under Government loans to growers or belongs outright to the Government as a result of loan foreclosures. Some cotton already has been withdrawn from loan stocks.

Agriculture Department cotton experts said there were prospects that combined domestic consumption and exports this season (which ends July 31) might total 13,600,000 bales, compared with 10,225,000 in the previous season. Production last year was about 11,600,000 bales.

The estimate was based largely on a Census Bureau report showing that during the first seven months of the current season exports and domestic consumption totaled 9,327,000 bales, compared with 6,337,000 in the like period in the previous season.

Exports totaled 4,917,000 bales and were valued at $289,122,000, compared with 2,455,000 bales and a value of $126,020,000 in the previous season.

Domestic consumption was reported at 6,810,000 bales, compared with 3,872,000 in the previous season. Officials said they were hopeful that domestic consumption during the 12-month period ending July 31 would equal or exceed the record volume of 7,850,000 bales established in the 1936-37 season.

As compared with figures for the seven months of the 1938-39 season, greater shipments were recorded for all important foreign destinations. The volume by principal countries this season and last, respectively, included:

The United Kingdom, 1,526,000 and 319,000 bales; Japan, 875,000 and 594,000; France, 618,000 and 304,000; Italy, 385,000 and 198,000; China, 355,000 and 44,000; Canada, 257,000 and 142,000; Spain, 221,000 and 15,000; Sweden, 180,000 and 70,000; Belgium, 178,000 and 67,000; The Netherlands, 149,000 and 51,000; Germany, 19,000 and 228,000; Poland, 5,000 and 116,000. The Census Bureau said there had been no cotton shipments to Germany since last September and none to Poland since August.

Goldboro, Md., March 14 (AP)—The receiver's sixth and final payment to creditors of the Goldboro Bank has been ratified by Judge Thomas J. Keating of the Caroline County Circuit Court. The final payment totaled $90,861.

ADVISES YOUNG GIRLS ENTERING WOMANHOOD

Thousands of young girls entering womanhood have found a "real friend" in Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound to help them get "smiling thru" restlessness, moodiness, nervous spells, and relieve cramps, headache, backache and embarrassing fainting spells due to female functional irregularities.

Taking Pinkham's Compound at this time may prove just what health and happiness may need. Famous for over 60 years—Pinkham's Compound is the best known and one of the most effective tonics made to help "women's" functional complaints. Over 1,000,000 women have reported remarkable benefits. WORTH TRYING.

Ringside Table

Signs of Spring. It may be snowing when you read this column, but three infallible signs of spring have just appeared.

Sign No. 1 is that the Gay Nineties, bright spot down on the Mount Vernon Boulevard, will reopen tonight under new ownership and management. A big delegation of District Government officials will be among the parties enjoying the opening festa. Dance music by Al Oddone and his orchestra and a floor revue including Bob King, of the stage and screen, in the role of emcee; Renee Rogers, "little queen of rhythm," and Catherine de Thierry and Hop Perrell, winners of the jitterbug terpsichorean events at the Harvest Moon Ball.

Spring sign No. 2 is that Milton Davis and the Rainbow Room orchestra have started to play golf again. After getting blown off the Argyle course the other day, they went down to Rock Creek where they claimed it was 6 degrees warmer and not so windy. On Sunday they'll be the guests of Pro Al Houghton at the Beaver Dam Club, play golf all afternoon and look at Lawson Little and Bobbie Jones in the evening.

No. 3 spring sign is that Glen Echo's press agent, Al Wilkins, has just come out of hibernation. That makes spring official. But confidentially, we won't believe in spring until the first robin appears in the Robin Hood.

SLIGHTLY VICIOUS ECHOES. Night Spot Manager: How do you like our new entertainers? Lady Houghton: Marvelous! They're much too good for the place... Waiter: should get a bonus for applauding Mrs. Harris, don't you think I these acts?

FACES AROUND PLACES. Shar-Zad. The social party hosted by the Royal McKennas whose two photogenic daughters were much admired. Maitre d'hotel Mazzoni out-did Renior in concocting the floral centerpiece.

Shoreham. Ted Lewis ("Is Everybody Happy") in the Blue Room, and reading a newspaper! Fie!... Niles T. Granlund, the famed night spot impresario... Representative Richard Kiebor of Texas gallantly stopping dancing to fasten his wife's slipper... Singer Marjorie King stopping to say hello. Marjorie's chatter is as funny as her singing is fine. P. S. The Metropolitan Choral Quartet will head next week's show at the Shoreham. After that comes Ethel Barrymore Coit.

Metronome Room. Vicki Hannekin, the cunning one who plays Priscilla, the gangster moll in "Key Largo" at the National. Vicki's an old friend of drummer Nat Polen of Eddy Brandt's orchestra.

O'Donnell's Sea Grill. Absolutely everybody in town. To give you an idea, Frank Coviello of the Mayflower Lounge orchestra was having such a good time at the Sea Grill opening that he decided to take the whole evening off. Within 30 minutes he encountered Mayflower's Manager Ralph Pollio, its musical boss-men, Maestro Sidney and Maurice Kafka, Public Relations Director Osgood Roberts and Publicist Helen Bernard. And they all greeted Frank by saying, "Why aren't you playing?" Except that Maurice added a couple of Hemingway pet names. That's what you call the Coviello luck.

Anchor Room. Manager John Connolly of the Hamilton Hotel hosting one of the many happy parties at Eileen George's opening and congratulating Annapolis Manager Jerry Weisinger on his talent picking.

ECONOMY HINT. There's no minimum charge at Troika after 12:45. But the floor show doesn't wind up until about 1:15. So if you arrive on the dot, you'll get a half hour of the floor show without paying the minimum.

HAPPENSTANCES. The new trio playing at the Lotus from 8:45 to 10:15 includes Tommy Suter, Harry Albert and Eddy Whitehead... Cafe Caprice's Eddy Mayhoff is very secretive and dreamy eyed about a society lass. He pledged us not to tell her name... The very pleasant

LUNCHEON BAR. The handsome bar at the Harrington Tavern has the exclusive hangout of the bartender. You can also perch there and enjoy some of the tastiest lunch-specials imaginable. We had a baked stuffed pork chop with glazed apples and string beans. Prices will astound you. They're so low.

EASTER BONNETS will be on parade in the Pall Mall Room tomorrow at luncheon. The Pall Mall Saturday fashion luncheons also include a dancing floor show staged by Ethel Flister of the Arthur Murray Dancers, a young lady who's checkbook of diversion ideas.

NIGHTINGALE WEEK-ENDS are always tremendous. Proprietor Nightingale is going to have to add an extra ten acres to his parking lot unless he does something to decrease the popularity of his spot. Dancing on Sunday nights, too.

ATTENTION, HEPCATS. It's "All Swing Night" at River Bend this evening. George Stein and his band are going strictly jive. These Friday "Swing Nights," started a few weeks ago, have drawn heavy crowds from the beginning.

Calvary Lenten Speaker Urges 'Giving' Motive

All Antisocial Acts Would Disappear Then, Dr. Corson Asserts

"Spiritual security" is one of the greatest needs of the world today, Dr. Fred Pierce Corson, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., said here last night.

Delivering a Lenten address at Calvary Methodist Church, the speaker pointed out that Christ's sense of holding fast to "things that never fail" is sorely needed today. The Master had spiritual security, but none in the physical or legal realm, he added.

Dr. Corson, who heads one of the oldest Methodist educational institutions in America, said he was advising his graduating classes that "you cannot go out in the world today and make a lot of money, but if the motive of your life is giving rather than getting, you will have an incentive to work."

Justice Laws to Speak

"If we didn't have getting as our motive, all our antisocial forces would disappear tomorrow in this land," he declared, "and if we could eliminate all the antisocial acts, we could release one-third of our national income for useful things."

The speaker was presented, the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, Calvary pastor, who announced that Justice Bolitha Laws, of the District Court, and teacher of the A. B. Pugh Men's Bible Class of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, would speak this Thursday at special Lenten services.

"Go hates neutrality and prefers righteousness to peace," the Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of Albany, N. Y., said at yesterday's noonday Lenten rites at Epiphany Church.

"As Lord Balfour says: 'He is a God who takes sides.' He is always on the side of justice and truth, and though things may be temporarily in eclipse, they are bound to prevail in the end."

Bishop Freeman to Speak

"Any individual or any nation that pretends to be neutral in the face of a moral issue is in danger of losing his soul. The question we must be constantly asking ourselves is not: 'Is God on our side?' but 'Are we on God's side?'"

Bishop Oldham, who will conclude his Lenten sermon series at Epiphany Church today at noon, addressed the concluding weekly Lenten service of Chevy Chase Protestant churches at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church last night. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will preach during Holy Week. Epiphany is his former pulpit.

Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital, addressed yesterday's daily Lenten rites of Southeast churches at the Penn Theater, where Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, is scheduled to speak today at noon. The Fifteenth Street Christian Church, led by the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, will conduct the coming week's programs.

Health Data Ready In Prince Georges

Reports on health conditions in Prince Georges County, compiled by 22 organizations, will be forwarded today to the United States Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the national rural health conservation contest.

Prince Georges will be rated with other counties throughout the East. H. Clay Whiteford is chairman of Prince Georges County's committee on health conservation, named by the Chamber of Commerce to gather information for the report.

Justice Miller Tells Woes Of Migrants

State Barriers Create 'Untouchable' Caste, He Charges

Legal interstate barriers against "transient labor and migratory families" have created a caste of "American untouchables" and "families without a country," Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals, charged yesterday.

Addressing the members of the Washington Travelers Aid Society, Justice Miller said these "Joad" families are condemned to "roam like the Wandering Jew" and are unable to get jobs and earn livings; unable to qualify for relief.

Shoguns at Border

He cited the numerous chambers of commerce, which "all over the country are drumming up travel," but "while the old habit still prevails of inviting all to come and be our guests, we watch our State lines with shotguns and select those whom we will permit to enter."

Justice Miller said "it is a natural instinct of self-preservation to build barriers." As applied to the present situation it has produced laws designed to: Punish vagrants, keep out undesirables, drive out undesirables already present, shut the doors to those who do leave, and punish as criminal conduct the bringing into a state of a person financially unable to take care of himself.

"These hungry, homeless, disillusioned families wander from door to door, from city to city, from State to State, until starvation or criminality overtakes them," he said.

"Then we find places for them in jails, in emergency hospitals and in potter's fields," he added.

Mrs. Ford Has Solution

In her annual report, Mrs. Margaret Ford, executive secretary, pointed out the "solution" lies in: "A centrally supervised program national in scope and sufficiently uniform and elastic to allow the return of families and individuals to their rightful home community or acceptance in another community where the best permanent adjustment seems possible according to the particular problems and abilities."

Among those present at the meeting were H. B. Willet, Jr., Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president of the aid society; Mrs. Justin Miller, Col. Robert H. Fletcher, Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Karl Henning, secretary of the society; Mrs. James Carroll Byrnes, Robert E. Bondy, Miss Cecil Lester Jones and Mrs. George B. Bloomer.

Key Witness Delays Auto Death Inquiry

Fails to Appear; Subpoena to Be Sought, Coroner Asserts

A coroner's inquest into the traffic death of Jerry J. Hanagan, 37, of 9 Grant Circle, was continued to an indefinite date yesterday when a key witness failed to appear.

Police said the witness, Lester R. Pinkney, was a passenger in the car which struck Hanagan Wednesday night in Constitution avenue between Tenth and Twelfth streets northwest. Sgt. Arthur S. Stephens, U. S. Marine Corps, of 2300 Eighteenth street northwest, is being held for a coroner's verdict as the driver of the car.

Not Known at Address

When Pinkney failed to appear he was sought at the address he gave police, in the 2500 block of E street northwest. He was not known at the address. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said that a subpoena for Pinkney would be issued.

Earlier, an inquest into the death of Somerset S. Robey, 70, of 1359 1/2 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, resulted in a verdict of accidental death. Robey, an employee of the Capital Transit Co., was killed Tuesday by one of that firm's street cars in the 1300 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

A hit-run driver yesterday knocked down two women who were standing in a safety zone at Fourteenth and Belmont streets northwest. Mrs. Alberta Saunders, 54, of 1417 Belmont street northwest, suffered head cuts and chest injuries. She was treated by a private physician. Marie De Vouges, 17, of Takoma Park, Md., refused treatment.

Women Hurt in Collision

Mrs. Charles S. Kline, 24, of 3820 Fifth street northwest, was treated for back injuries yesterday at Providence Hospital after a two-car collision in the 800 block of Sixth street northwest. She was a passenger in a cab driven by her husband. The cab was in collision with a District Water Department coupe driven by Ray M. Dowe, 44, of Arlington, Va., an inspector.

Takoma Firemen Name Conferees

A committee to confer with leading citizens of Takoma Park, Md., who are working on the establishment of a community center has been appointed by Joseph Martin, president of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department. It was announced last night.

Herman C. Heffner, David Abercrombie and Joseph Martin will meet with Mayor John R. Adams, chairman of the center committee, to discuss a plan whereby the firemen will not lose revenue if a municipal building is erected.

'Murder in Cathedral' To Be Given Tonight

Catholic University will conclude the first annual Catholic Theater program tonight with a presentation of the play, "Murder in the Cathedral," in the University Theater, beginning at 8:30 o'clock.

Handicapped Children Get Bids to 'Pinocchio' Premiere

Crippled Youngsters in Regular Classes And Those Attending Langdon School Will Be Excused for Special Showing

The formidable task of rounding up Washington's crippled and physically handicapped children and arranging for their attendance at a special premiere of "Pinocchio" next Thursday was attacked yesterday on several fronts.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, told The Post—cosponsor of the event with R-K-O Keith's, where the picture will be shown—that crippled children in regular classes, as well as those attending Langdon School, will be excused for the performance.

The Council of Social Agencies volunteered to poll all of its affiliated groups which minister to crippled and chronically ill minors. In those instances where children must have transportation provided for them, the agency will notify The Post how many are to be called for and returned to the starting point. That no deserving child may miss the premiere, which will enable the handicapped youngsters to view "Pinocchio" a full day ahead of the paying public, nurses of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society and of the Health Department will be supplied with tickets when they go into homes where there are crippled children.

Dr. Ballou said school children eligible to attend the showing should bring notes from their parents for approval by their teachers and principals. This will not be necessary, however, for pupils in the crippled children's classes at Langdon School. Arrangements there will be made by Mrs. Beulah J. Drake, the teacher.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 14. When you thousands who write me asking how to get into the movies and think all you have to do to succeed is either be born with a gold spoon in your mouth or win some kind of a contest—I'd like you to remember the story I'm about to tell you. Just put his name down, 'cause you'll be seeing it a lot. He's Eddie Bracken and plays Dizzy in "The Aldrich Family." Born of poor parents in Astoria, Long Island, he started his career at 4, singing songs for the Knights of Columbus, women's clubs, etc. If there was a ham or turkey being raffled off and a song would get it, Eddie's mama got it!

He joined the Kiddie Troupers and made comedy one-reelers. His first show was "The Lottery." In that was Junior Durkin, later killed in the same automobile with Jackie Coogan's father. Eddie went to a professional school for children and his classmates were Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Helen Hack Mack, Eddie Phillips and young Durkin.

Eddie told me he'd had 16 flops in New York before he succeeded, and believe me, they're vitally important to any actor. At 18, he got the part of a 37-year-old plumber in "Iron Men." George Abbott saw it and sent for him. Wanted Eddie for the commandant, an old man, in "Brother Rat," but when he saw the boy, gave him the youngest part instead.

After "Brother Rat" he went into a road show of "What A Life," and played Henry Aldrich and told me: "Don't believe it when you hear you have to have pull or be related to the right people." He's been with Abbott six years and in all that time hasn't had a day's vacation till he came to Hollywood. But it wasn't his first trip here. When he was 16 he hitchhiked from New York with $4.25, which ran out in St. Louis, but he got here in ten days. Got a job at U. A. but did a pretty fancy job of starving there, so got bus fare from mother, returned home and got a job—another flop, with the late Lou Tellegen.

Last summer while playing in Gloucester he discovered Lella Ernst, No. 1 glamour girl of Boston last year and wrote Abbott to sign her, but it was no go—cast for their next play "Too Many Girls" was filled. When George saw her he signed her for the lead. And that's how she got to Hollywood and is now playing the love interest in "Henry Aldrich." What a natural she's for Twentieth Century's "Deb No. 1"—she's a darling. Incidentally, Eddie married his leading lady in "What A Life"—she's Connie Nickerson, and she's retired—thinks one career in a family is enough.

It was while he was touring with "What A Life" that he went to high schools and put on a one-man show, burlesque of a serious speech which always preceded his. And called his act "How to Develop a Character." In it he stutters, sneezes, has St. Vitus dance, hay fever—all while developing a character! And he'll do that act on March 11 at the annual party given for the Four A's.

For "Lillian Russell" Twentieth Century's expense budget lists $10,000 for cut flowers for the picture. $800 a week seems like an awful lot for flowers, but under hot studio lights they wither quickly. And for "Lillian" they have to have the real thing.

Attention: Bob Hope, Ken Murray, etc.! Those unending jokes about Pomona are okay in California, I guess. But have no place on national shows. People in the East miss the point. Tell me—is Pomona bird, beast, fish or a new brand of toothpaste?

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 14.—Recently two ladies approached the Senegambian doorman at the Beachcombers and asked: "It is all right for two ladies to go upstairs and dine?" "No, gentlemen?" asked the doorman. "No, we're alone," they stated. "I guess it's all right," the doorman assured. "Up this way—but no dancin' with each other." They promised to heed this warning. And Constance Collier and Mary Pickford went upstairs.

Last spring Cathedral Pictures decided to screen "The Great Commandment," and brought the script to John Beal. Because of its theme and idealistic aims, Beal agreed to play the leading role at less than his usual salary. He appeared in almost every scene, and worked day and night to finish the picture within the three-week, low-budget shooting schedule. The picture was previewed in Hollywood, received rave notices and Beal was accorded exceptional reviews. Darryl Zanuck outbid three other companies, bought the picture, and will remake this film, whose greatest asset was its simplicity—with Tyrone Power replacing Beal.

Frederick Lonsdale, last of the snuff-users, is trying to revive the custom. A Syracuse plant this week started work on the first large munitions order from France—850,000 5-inch shells.

M-G-M soon will release "Florian," the picture about Austria, with authentic background shots photographed by Rosson, the M-G-M cameraman who had been arrested while making his scenic photos. When Rosson arrived there, he hired two local assistants, and photographed scenes near the Italian border—where Nazi fortifications were being built. All three were arrested, and finally the American Consul arranged for their release. When they were freed, Rosson apologized to his two assistants for having been responsible for getting them into trouble. "Oh, that's all right," they consoled him, and showed him their badges—GESTAPO badges.

SONG: In Warner Bros. production of Louis Bromfield's "And It All Came True," Ann Sheridan portrays a blues singer. The song written especially for her was called "Angels in the Skies." Because of Miss Sheridan's unusual diction, it sounded like "Angels in Disguise," even after long rehearsals. And so the lyricist was summoned to rewrite the lyrics, and the song will be released as "Angel in Disguise."

GREETING: Giovanni Martinelli came into Fefe's Monte Carlo, and Felix Ferry approached his table. "Signor Martinelli," Fefe began, "since you're in Fefe's Monte Carlo, you really should meet Fefe." "Very well," the singer agreed. "Where is Fefe?" "Signor Martinelli," Ferry beamed, clasped the singer's hands. "I am Fefe."

AMBITION: Because Mrs. James Farley loves her husband so much, she is not anxious to see him burdened with the heavy cares attendant upon being President of this country. Mrs. Farley has been in Washington long enough to realize how great is the responsibility of the office, and her thought is only of Jim's personal welfare. A friend assured her that he was campaigning for Farley, "because I'm such a good friend of yours, and so I'll be able to get into the White House." "If you're such a good friend of mine," replied Mrs. Farley, "you should try to keep him out of there."

MUSIC DEPT.: Kurt Weill, the composer, lives on a farm at Suffern, N. Y., and commutes to New York. He told of the benefits of country-life, of its charm and quiet. "But aren't you afraid of thieves?" he was asked. "I've got a gun," Weill sighed, "but it's no use." "And what do they steal from you?" the composer was asked. "They're always stealing," he replied, "my type of music."

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, ETC.: Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Phelps, the newly designated King and Queen of Honeymoon Island, came to New York before beginning their two-week honeymoon at the island owned by C. M. Washburn. A Paramount Newsreel cameraman brought them to the Stork Club to photograph them. He asked them questions, whose replies first were censored by Chic Farmer, the Stork Club's press agent. "Lay off," the cameraman warned Farmer. "We want those yokelish answers, because this is for the newsreels." "We don't want those yokelish answers," Farmer returned, "because this is the Stork Club."

Melodrama Is Having Spurt In Popularity

Melodrama is getting its face lifted and is undergoing a streamlining process in Hollywood.

Until the last few months, the melodrama had been relegated to the category of minor pictures and was used largely as a training ground for inexperienced youngsters.

Today, there is a long list of melodramas with star-studded casts either in production or almost ready for release at every studio in the cinema capital. These vary in type from the comedy-melodrama to the heavy-handed features.

The latest one to start at Paramount is "Destiny," which is Basil Rathbone's first picture under his contract with the Marathon street studio. In the cast with Rathbone are John Howard, Ellen Drew, Ralph Morgan, Martin Koslek, Vera Vague and Kitty Kelly, with Tim Whelan directing.

As it goes before the cameras, Director James Hogan is completing the shooting of "The Woman From Hell," with Blanche Yurka, J. Carol Naish, William Henry, Ralph Bellamy and Paul Kelly.

Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard are scheduled to start work in "The Ghost Breakers" soon. This is to be a successor to the highly successful "The Cat and the Canary."

Paramount also has "Adventure in Diamonds," with

George Brent and Isa Miranda, and "The Way of All Flesh," with Gladys George and Akim Tamiroff, almost ready for release.

Dramatic Picture Tells Tragic Story of Rail Crossing Wreck

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Death Was at Hand— A Catholic priest administers extreme unction to the dead and maimed strewn along a railroad track at McAllen, Tex., after the truck in which they were riding was struck by a Missouri-Pacific passenger train. Occupants of the truck were fruit pickers, mostly of Mexican extraction, bound for a nearby orchard. Twenty-six never knew what struck them. Sixteen others were seriously injured. Note the youth (left foreground) crawling from beneath part of the wreckage of the demolished truck.

Smiling John McAuliffe Will Have Time for Leisure

His Work Is Done— Macfarland Junior High School students, who long will have a warm spot in their hearts for jovial John McAuliffe, showered him with gifts yesterday when he retired as custodian of the school. Jack Scott, Peggy Landergren and Dorothy Scott, all 14, tell their friend good-by.

Like boys and girls following the Pied Piper of Hamelin, pupils of Macfarland Junior High School yesterday poured into their auditorium to honor a man with a captivating Irish grin.

He was John D. McAuliffe, retiring as Macfarland's custodian after 20 years in the public school system.

"I never before saw that hall so filled," he said when it was all over, after a delegation of youngsters had presented him with a flower, a box of candy and some other inexpensive gifts. "They're a grand lot of kids."

Just about every one of the school's 1,200-odd pupils must have been there, for the large auditorium was packed to overflowing in a singular tribute to a man who, as a lad, came over from County Kerry many years ago.

Sunday will be the first St. Patrick's Day he's been a gentleman of leisure since 1889, when he began his first job in Washington as an engineer at Columbia Hospital.

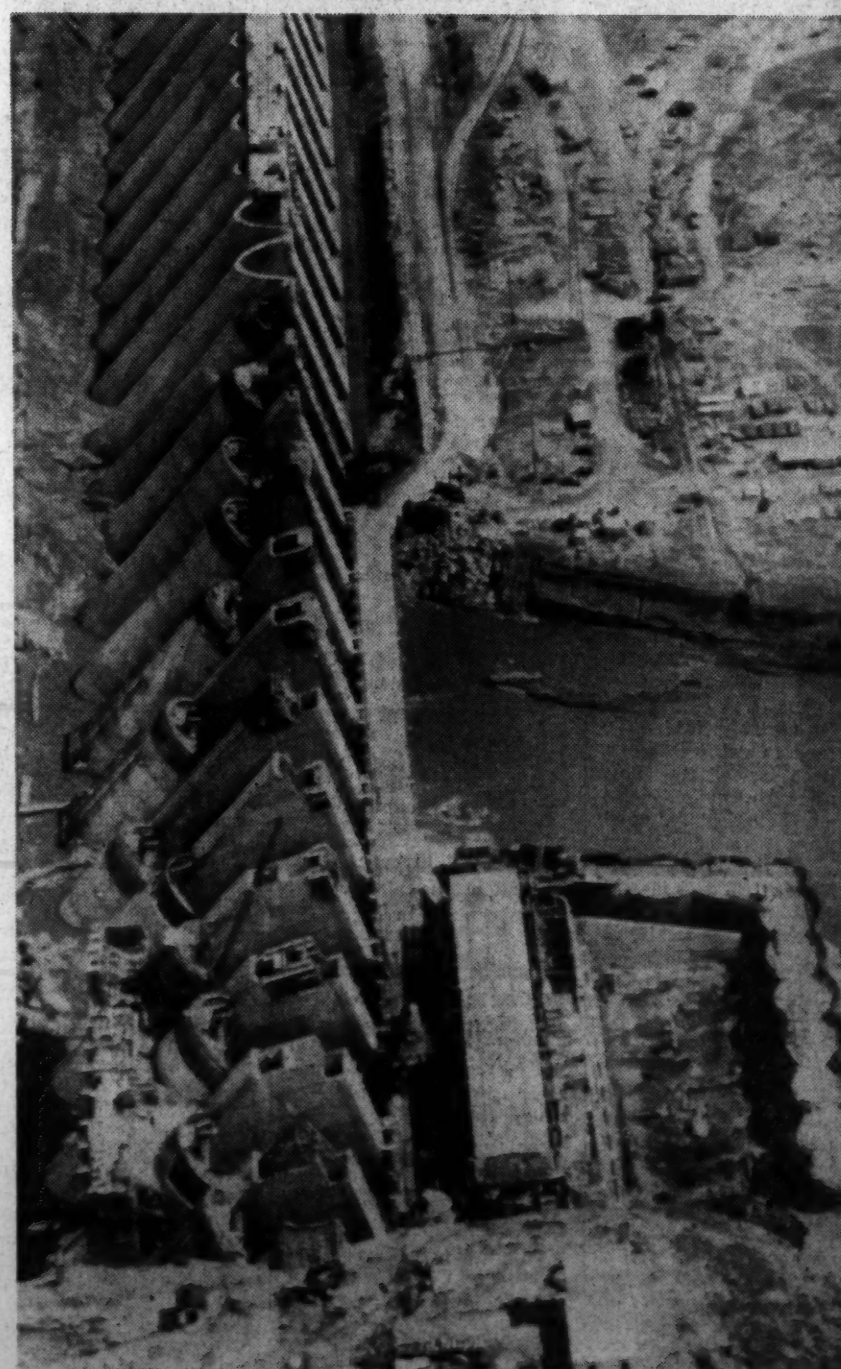

"I was almost a St. Patrick's baby," he reminded, "for I was born on March 1, 1870."

McAuliffe served the hospital until 1920, when he entered the public school system as engineer-janitor at another Columbia—the old junior high school at Seventh and O streets northwest. Subsequently he worked at Langley Junior High and Western High as chief engineer.

As an engineer, he would have had to retire at 65, but he was so popular and well liked that in 1935, when he came to Macfarland, he was reclassified as a custodian to keep him in the system for another five years.

This afternoon, when classes are over, McAuliffe will be honored at a party to be given by Principal H. P. Safford and the school faculty. His retirement becomes effective April 1—"April Fool Day, so maybe this is a joke," he chuckled—and he'll be coasting in on accumulated annual leave, starting from 11:30 a. m. yesterday when his actual retirement began.

He lives at 318 High street, Chevy Chase, Md., "where there are a fine lawn and a big flower garden to keep me busy. When I get tired there'll be a porch, 10 feet wide and 45 long, for lounging."

attempt made to delimit the disputed Russian-Manchukuoan frontier came to naught.

The peace that has reigned between Russia and Japan of late was admittedly only a truce. And unless Russia decides to embark on new acts of aggression in Europe, that truce may now be endangered and at a singularly unpropitious time for Japan.

The stresses and strains of more than two and a half years of war are compelling the Japanese army in China to draw in its horns and seek ways and means of limiting rather than extending military activities on the mainland. Thus Finland's collapse is for Japan, no less than for Sweden and the Allies, a source of additional anxiety.

Preparing Coercion

Albert S. Goss, land bank commissioner, whose resignation has just been announced, is the third high official to retire from the Farm Credit Administration since its transfer by executive order to the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Goss confirms reports that a major conflict has developed over the policies to be pursued by the agencies of the FCA. In a formal statement he indicates that the farmer-managed cooperative system, based on careful selection of risks and joint responsibility of borrowers, is being jeopardized by efforts to use the system for political purposes.

The fact that a Presidential election is in the offing may help to explain the urgency of the pressure to relax lending safeguards, as Mr. Goss hints. But the major cause of the conflict of policies goes deeper. It grows out of fundamentally different conceptions of what the objectives of the farm credit system should be.

The former management of the FCA rightly believed that a strictly independent organization, free from political influences, is essential both to prevent dissipation of public funds through unsound loans, and to achieve the original objectives of the farm credit system. That was to establish permanent credit agencies controlled and owned by farmers and able to finance themselves without Government subsidies.

Since the FCA has become a subordinate unit of the Department of Agriculture, subject to the control of the Secretary of Agriculture and his appointees, attainment of that goal has been jeopardized. Mr. Goss asserts that the present tendency is "toward a type of so-called credit in which personal responsibility is denied, loans are made to everybody, no adequate margin of safety is provided, and the Government pays the loss whenever the borrower wants to quit paying."

That is the almost inevitable result of making the FCA an integral part of the Department of Agriculture, with its innumerable programs for crop control, price stabilization and various forms of aid for farmers, all providing relief under the guise of loans. It is no secret, indeed, that Secretary Wallace and the newly appointed FCA governor, Mr. A. G. Black, lean toward the type of easy credit which Mr. Goss denounces.

Mr. Black recently stated that the FCA is "taking the broad social view that its duty is to help farmers become landowners, even if it has to adopt special measures to help them." He also said that, while farmers would not be required to participate in AAA crop control programs, the FCA would suggest that they take part. In short, it seems plain that the new management favors using the FCA as a weapon to force upon farmers the agricultural programs of the Administration.

If the FCA is to become completely integrated with the Department of Agriculture in this fashion its doom is sealed. For a sound, self-supporting system of agricultural credit must be based on sound credit policies. It is impossible to mix politics with banking without courting disaster. It is equally impossible to combine relief with sound credit management.

As the former president of the Federal Land Bank of Spokane said in tendering his resignation recently: "The thing that makes integration with the Department of Agriculture unsafe for the Farm Credit Administration is that the Secretary of Agriculture, with all his multitudinous programs, must be continually asking Congress for legislative assistance and appropriations of public funds. It is only common sense to say that under present procedure these things cannot be accomplished without concessions here and there along the line, in which political patronage is very definitely involved."

Prompt action is essential if the FCA, which has been in process of upbuilding for almost a quarter of a century, is to be saved for the farmers. The least that Congress should do is to appoint an investigating committee to inquire into the causes of the upheaval that has deprived the Farm Credit Administration of trusted and valued officials.

In the light of the information secured, it would then be possible to follow a conscious legislative policy, designed either to save or deliberately to transform the existing system. As matters now stand, the issue is likely to be irrevocably decided by personal decision of the Secretary of Agriculture and his aides.

The Time Element

The time element in the European war has shifted so as to favor Germany. This is perhaps the most significant development made clear by the Russo-Finnish peace.

As long as that war continued there was a situation of instability throughout middle Europe, from the Baltic to the Mediterranean. There was the constant possibility that two new fronts might be created, in Scandinavia and in the Near East. There was also uncertainty among the smaller neutrals, from Sweden to Greece, as to the side on which their bread was buttered. The policy of all these little nations was, so far as possible, to avoid offending either Berlin on the one hand or London and Paris on the other.

The victory achieved by Russia, at great cost, over Finland has greatly changed this situation. It has removed all possibility of another front in Scandinavia and it has made such a development in southeastern Europe very unlikely. But more important than this is the measure of economic stability which it has introduced among the little nations which lie within the zone of German military influence.

Unwillingly, but none the less inevitably, Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, to the southeast, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland to the north, are being drawn more closely into the economic orbit of the Reich. There was a tendency to that effect before the war. It is intensified by conditions which impede overseas trade and tend to weld Germany and her neighbors into a single economic bloc. It will be further increased if land fighting is now confined to occasional fusillades along the Maginot Line.

The Anglo-French blockade, while injuring Germany in many respects, is also stimulating the trend toward German economic domination in central Europe. Machinery and finished goods which the Reich used to export overseas are now available, so long as German productive capacity is maintained, for exchange against the food supplies and raw materials of Scandinavia and the Balkans. The development of large-scale barter is rendered easier by the wartime interferences with normal international trade.

It follows, and it must be realized, that the blockade tactics on which the English and French have so far relied are strengthening as well as weakening the German economy. It is impossible to say with certainty which tendency is the stronger. But as long as military requirements make no serious drain on German manpower that country's productive capacity will probably exceed its minimum domestic needs. That is one reason why Germany may be expected to stay strictly on the defensive in the west.

In the meantime the Allies, particularly Great Britain, are themselves facing a war of attrition. It is represented not merely by the heavy toll of British shipping and the decline of that nation's absolutely vital export trade. The strain on the English is most clearly illustrated by the current proposal of Mr. J. M. Keynes. In the opinion of that famous economist the only way in which Great Britain can continue to finance the staggering war cost is for the government to confiscate income on a sliding scale running up to 85 per cent in the higher brackets. That is for the current year, Mr. Keynes points out. If the war is protracted longer, he says, it will necessitate sacrifices "at which imagination boggles."

On singularly unconvincing evidence a certain school of thought has concluded that a war of stalemate will automatically weaken Germany and increase Allied strength. Again it is a case either of wishful thinking or of reasoning falsely from the analogy of the last war. Today there is evidence to indicate that the longer the present type of warfare lasts the stronger relatively the German economy will be and the more precarious that of the Allies will become.

It's easy to secure governmental aid. Just hold out your hand and make a noise like a farmer.

When it comes to food for thought, she has been on a hunger strike most of her life.

Editor's Fate

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

This is an old newspaper gag, as the actors would call it, but many readers may not have seen it, others may have forgotten it. At any rate a reader clips it and sends it to us. It is from the Coffeerville Courier. The paragraph was written a long time ago to explain why editors do not get rich, and is as follows: "When a child is born, the attending physician gets $15; the editor, who gives him the proper send-off, gets $0. When he is christened, the clergyman gets $10; the editor gets $0. When he is married, the clergyman gets $5; the editor gets $0 for a long-winded article about the 'beautiful and accomplished bride.' When he dies, the doctor gets from $25 to $100; the undertaker gets from $50 to $200; and the editor gets $0 for the complimentary obituary."

Letters To The Editor

Too Late!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To be or not to be—too young. That is the question. Whether 'tis nobler to seek the Presidency in guise of infant prodigy, or, rising up against the tyranny of time claim adolescence while still in pining bibt?

A lady from Millbrook, N. Y., pleads tolerance for Dewey's youth. "Hannibal was given full command of the Carthaginian army at 28; Augustus became consul before he was 20," she glows with maternal pride for the budding youth of fame and fable who carry a banner yeelp: "Excelsior." But alas! Her plea exposes Mr. Dewey as too old. Why elect him President when at 38 he is only a more distinct attorney? Ten years too late to be a Hannibal Eighteen years past being an Augustus! Verily, the boy is in his dotage.

Early And Just Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do you hope for an early and just peace? If so, organize groups of citizens to urge belligerents to concentrate on an effort to revive international trade. Put all merely political questions on the table and, above all, cease backbiting and denunciation.

In recent addresses leading statesmen have advocated measures which would, if adopted, lead directly to a revival of trade between the nations now at war. Lord Lothian, the present British Ambassador, urges some form of economic federation. Lebrun, the President of France, states that the liberties of all nations depend in large part on the establishment of economic guarantees. Senator Mussolini needs coal and other raw materials, and advocates access to them. Herr Hitler holds that the obstacles in the way of unrestricted trade can be removed by the organization of markets and regulation of the currency.

If the belligerents could be prevailed upon to put aside the political questions which are at present dividing them, and concentrate on the revival of trade, which all desire, the catastrophic phase of the war might be avoided.

The Symphony Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An orchestra is by way of being an unbalanced unit to start with. The problem of either bullying or by more subtle means influencing a vast group of men of varied technical ability to do as a conductor wishes is no little problem in itself.

Various great conductors use different methods. In the case of the National Symphony it appears to be a question of personal violent dislike for the present conductor, Dr. Kindler, among a majority of the members of the orchestra. Dr. Kindler, not having the reputation of being a truly area conductor, cannot afford to use the tactics of cajoling and bullying or antagonizing the members of his organization as let us say, someone of the caliber of Toscanini could very easily do. It appears that the sooner Dr. Kindler and his band of music-makers can get together and make some attempt to see their many and varied problems, have a more personal relationship with each other, the sooner the orchestra will evolve into being a unit comparable with the seasoned orchestras of the country.

Good Neighbors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one encouraging sign which is emerging from the shadow of the present European and Asiatic wars: that is, the growing friendship between North and South America.

The necessity of better relationships between the people of these continents was recognized by their respective leaders almost from the beginning of their national existence. Simon Bolivar, the great liberator, dreamed of uniting the Americas on humanitarian and political ideals. The Monroe Doctrine was formulated by the United States in 1823 with the avowed purpose of preventing reconquest of the New World by European powers.

But mutual distrust constituted a Chinese wall against a satisfactory understanding between Latin America and the United States. The former feared the so-called "Yankee imperialism," the latter had no love for Latin tradition.

It took a series of disillusionments and the present war to make them realize that peaceful intercourse with Europe is well nigh impossible. Looking over European history of the last three or four hundred years, they find that scarcely a decade has passed in which war has not redressed the soil of some part of Europe.

It seems that the logic of history and necessity is forcing the people of Latin America and the people of the United States to the conclusion that the interests of the American States, collectively as well as individually, lie in the Americas. It is, therefore, time to part company with quarrelsome old Europe and seek congenial association with people who hold similar political ideals.

It is hoped that the present cordial feelings in the American republics will develop into an enduring political, cultural, and economic cooperation among themselves. After all, it is unnatural for neighbors not to be neighbors.

E. B. ACLAO.
Glenn Dale, Md., March 11.

Dr. Kindler from the National Symphony on the ground that a creator is inferior to the thing he has created, is not surprising. Here somebody is always after the job some one else built up. So why shouldn't this meddling be extended to the arts?

Washington had no trained symphony players when Dr. Kindler gathered together a new orchestra. He had to develop the orchestra and raised their standards of taste.

Regarding this whole unfair controversy about the orchestra "outgrowing" the man who made it, may we remark that Washington is all too full of amateur critics whose slender musical knowledge is obtained from program comments.

Irish Music

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the advent of St. Patrick's Day, the radios of our land will be blasting a forth so-called "Irish" music. This music bears about as much relation to the traditional music of Ireland as it does to the music of Finland. Most of it originates in Tin Pan Alley. In Eire it is scarcely known.

Such "Irish" music as "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" was written in Kentucky by a German named Westernmark for his sick wife, whose nostalgia for her home in Long Island was the cause of it all. "Come Back to Erin" was written by a Baltimore lady, Mrs. Charles Barnard, under the name of Claribel. It was written to honor Queen Victoria's visit to Ireland.

The "Mother Macree" type of thing and the lumbdown shacks of County Down, etc., are the product of the Tin Pan Alley maestros, the same boys who wrote "Carolina Moon" and "Alabama Moon" and stopped writing about moons when they ran out of States.

It would be a pious idea if some of our broadcasting stations would give Ireland a break, musically speaking, and let the American public in on such genuine traditional Irish music as "The Coulin" or "The Blackbird" or "Savourneen Deelish," or the countless ancient airs which Thomas Moore sought to preserve by writing verse to fit the melody.

That most hauntingly beautiful of all Irish airs known as "Danny Boy" or "Would God I Were the Tender Apple Blossom" is the ancient lament of Emer, an Irish Queen, for her lover, Cuchullain. This Irish music has been sung for centuries.

One Reaction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, I went to see "Gone With the Wind." A magnificent picture. What joy and satisfaction it must bring to Mrs. Mitchell and the motion picture industry on its tremendous success.

There is just one flaw in the ointment—for me. When my child goes to school every morning she has to hand on her heart and extends it to "Old Glory" and pledges her allegiance. One wonders what if another flag flew there—or in place of one flag we were accustomed to two flags—where would the border line of the other flag be?

For many years the Stars and Stripes have stirred the hearts of Americans wherever they have trod, whether on home soil or on foreign shores. I do not want my child to see "Gone With the Wind." I do not want to destroy in the budding mind the patriotic impulse that instinctively arises at the sight of her flag.

Both her grandfathers wore the blue uniform. Stripped of all color and glamour, the picture characterizes that blue uniform as a beast of prey—at only to be shot in cold blood. The harlot is sanctified—but the conqueror is left only to be hated. Come back, "Gone With the Wind" when my child has reached maturity and she can judge for herself.

The Post Impressionist

As Sherman Said—

Some months ago Bett Anderson wrote a story of the young wife of a history professor, who was forced to share her husband with "the General"—an unnamed character who was the subject of extensive research and endless study on the part of her lord and master. The General became such an integral part of their lives that eventually she felt as if she were wed to both substance and shadow.

I salute the lady with a gesture of fellowship, appreciating her problem and, to a certain extent, sharing her situation. With me, however, it is not one general, but a host of them—practically all of the important chieftains of the Confederacy, to say nothing of the more outstanding Northern leaders. There the comparison ceases. The General was part and parcel of that other household

Chronology Of The Finnish War

Proves We Gave Finns Much Rhetoric;
No Real Aid

By Dorothy Thompson

NOV. 23, 1939—Secretary Hull, after conferring with the President, offers his good offices to Finland and Russia to end dispute. Senator Pittman, head of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, denounces Russia. American Ambassador Steinhardt leaves Stockholm to return to his post in Moscow.

Dec. 1—President Roosevelt condemns Russian bombings of Finnish territory. "News of bombings . . . profound shock to people of the United States . . . Despite efforts to solve by peaceful methods . . . One power has resorted to force . . . Tragic to see policy of force extending . . . Wanton disregard for law . . . All peace-loving people still hoping . . . Unanimously condemn . . . Present trend to force makes insecure independent existence of small nations on every continent . . . jeopardizes rights of mankind . . ."

Dec. 4—Russia openly invades Finland.

Dec. 8—Ex-President Hoover begins organizing Finnish Relief Fund.

Dec. 10—United States Government opens credits of $10,000,000 through the Export-Import Bank and the RFC, with which Finland can buy "agricultural supplies and other civilian supplies." President Roosevelt advocates Congressional action to refund to Finland part of the installments she had paid on her debt to the United States. Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procopé calls on the President.

Dec. 12—Roosevelt denies shifting neutrality policy. Implies no victim of aggression will be aided in purchasing war materials in the United States, but fears to be specific on the point.

Dec. 15—France and England begin shipments of war materials to Finland. This continues throughout the Finnish war. The total of these shipments amounts to 175 pursuit planes with crews, 475 heavy guns, 5,000 machine guns, and 200,000 hand grenades from France, 225 bombing planes with military crews, 446 heavy guns from England. Several thousand volunteers from both countries—number unspecified. Aid also goes to Finland from Sweden; a total of material and money estimated at between 60 and 70 million dollars.

Jan. 17, 1940—Roosevelt asks Congress to consider loan to Finland and to study means of financing purchases here. Congress is cool. Finns announce they want planes and guns, not food. Only $3,000,000 of United States credit has been used.

Jan. 18—Garner leads opposition in Congress to a loan. Says it might drag United States into the war. Big campaign against the Finnish loan starts under "Keep America Out of War" slogan.

Feb. 5—The supreme council of the Allied powers decided to send troops to Finland.

Feb. 9—U. S. Senate adopts resolution permitting SEC to expedite consideration of any possible private bond issue for Finland.

Feb. 12—100,000 regular troops stand by in British and French ports, and the Allied governments tell Finland that if she will make a formal appeal for help the British and French governments will bring pressure upon the Swedish and Norwegian governments to allow troops to pass through.

FEB. 17—Sumner Welles sails for Europe on the S. S. Rex. On the same ship is Mr. Axel Wenner-Gren, leading Swedish industrialist, who, according to Mr. Kluckhohn, of the New York Times, was summoned from Nassau, where he has a winter estate, by Gen. Goering, who had informed him that he wanted Germany to make peace in Finland.

Feb. 22—The Russian government asks the British government through its ambassador to London, Mr. Malley, to forward peace terms to the Finns. Lord Halifax refuses, owing to the harshness of the terms.

March 1—The Nazi government, acting through Swedish intermediaries, begins pressure in Sweden to oppose landing of Allied troops.

March 13—Mr. Shirer, C. B. S. correspondent in Berlin, reveals that Germany sent an ultimatum to Sweden threatening to invade Sweden if troops were allowed to pass.

March 13—Valno Tanner, Finnish foreign minister, makes a statement categorically confirming that the Western Allies had offered a fully equipped expeditionary force to Finland; that the Finnish military command had carefully studied the scheme and exhaustively studied its details, and that it had been found to be effective in every respect; that the only possible route lay across Norway and Sweden; that the governments of these two countries had been asked by the Finnish government on several occasions to permit Allied auxiliary forces to cross their territories, but that this permission had been categorically refused.

THIS, in its briefest high lights, is the story of the Russo-Finnish war. The greatest neutral in the world, supported by the overwhelming sympathies of its own population, refused to do anything of any vital importance to aid neutral Finland. Congressional debate greatly encouraged the Russians, and the Germans to believe that, no matter what happened, the United States would not even risk a really useful dollar.

The Allies, despite the fact that they are already engaged in a serious struggle with Germany, offered to send a hundred thousand men and depleted their own war material stores to send substantial assistance to the Finns. Further assistance was impossible because the Germans threatened the whole Scandinavian peninsula with invasion if they allowed it.

The peace treaty, which is disastrous for Finland, originated in Berlin and Moscow. Mr. Roosevelt this morning (Thursday) praises the valor of the Finns and says, "The ending of this war does not yet clarify the inherent right of small nations to the maintenance of their integrity." This column differs with the President. Whatever is proved or is not proved, the position of small nations in the world as it is at present is clarified. They have no position.

Now, let's take a look at the general situation. Wall Street regards this as a great German-Russian victory. It is betting that the Germans and/or the Russians will win the war. This fact greatly encourages this column, which was also very depressed concerning the larger issues. For

Off The Record

By Ed Reed

"The bank examiners are coming tomorrow—so they gave me the books, too!"

Stalin Encouraged
By The Attitude Of Congress

Wall Street's betting has been so uniformly wrong in the last six years that its defeatism over the Allies ought to make stocks go up in London and Paris. Wall Street was betting in June that there was not going to be any war. This is unquestionably a victory for Russia. Whether it is a victory for Germany is a moot question. If it is, one wonders why peace waves are emanating from Berlin with such continuity. If the presumption is that Russia is interested in a German victory over the Allies, then this presumption of a gain for Germany is valid. But why Russia should be interested in a German victory is incomprehensible to this column.

Russia now controls the Baltic. The Russian troops had broken the Mannerheim Line, the first demonstration made in this war that fortified lines of the type of the Maginot Line and the West Wall can be crashed. She could have taken the whole of Finland. She preferred to take all the critically strategic areas and take Finland into her security system, in which are included Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Under the terms of the nonaggression pact, which is part of the treaty and which is similar to the treaties concluded with the other Baltic states, Finland must go to the aid of Russia if attacked by any major power. This includes Germany.

It is clear that Russia did not wish to become involved in a war between Germany and the Western Allies. If she had become involved in the war, it would have had to be on the side of Germany. Therefore, she preferred to make peace.

And so did Germany prefer to make peace. Had Germany desired that the war should be taken into the Scandinavian Peninsula, where her advantages for landing troops are immeasurably better than those of the Allies, she would not have sent an ultimatum to Sweden and brought pressure to bear upon Norway. She would have let events take their course and intervened at the advantageous moment.

And had the Allies, out of sympathy for Finland, taken on a war with Soviet Russia on a terrain which is very unfavorable for them, they would have had Sweden if troops were allowed to pass.

SWEDEN, NORWAY and Finland are now discussing a Scandinavian pact. What kind of pact will this be? Will it be a pact for the strictest maintenance of Scandinavian neutrality, or will these nations all look to the Allies for protection and come into the German sphere of influence? If they do the latter they will no longer be strictly neutral, and it is a question whether Britain and France will feel themselves required to regard their neutrality as real neutrality.

The Scandinavian Peninsula, having yielded to the threat of force on the part of Germany and Russia and refused to accept Allied aid, may go on yielding to threats of force. But the Allies' moral position is excellent. Nobody, including the Swedes and the Norwegians, believes that Britain and France would ever turn Sweden and Norway into another Czechoslovakia or Poland. The national interests of the Scandinavian Peninsula are still with the Allies and not with Germany and Russia. If Russia stands pat on a treaty negotiated with Germany's aid, what excuse will Germany have to make further demands on Scandinavia?

Meanwhile, the people of the United States will be glad to welcome Mr. Sumner Welles back home, and will be relieved to hear that the President is not prepared to be the protagonist in a super-Munich. There are some bright boys around the President who think it would be just swell if he could duplicate T. R.'s performance at Portsmouth, when that other Roosevelt settled the Russo-Japanese War. Then he would go out of office as a great peacemaker.

IN FACT, the two capitals that seem most earnestly anxious to achieve peace on the basis of the present status quo are Washington and Berlin—an odd combination. Hardly was the news of the Finnish peace out than Mr. Sol Bloom, of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, and Mr. Pat Harrison, of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, allowed themselves to be quoted by Mr. Warner on the radio that the news was just fine. Mr. Bloom said that he hoped the news of settling of difficulties between nations would be adopted without resorting to continued killing, and that the peace agreement will show reason and logic to the other belligerent countries. Senator Harrison said that "anything that tends toward the settlement of differences between the warring nations over there is delightful news to me."

Gentlemen, the Finns lost the war, and to admit that you have lost a war is always a way of getting peace.

Senator Pittman has burst out with a demand for a 30-day armistice and says "each of the warring powers has laid down conditions of peace which anticipate the destruction of the economic life of the other." The Allies have laid down no such conditions of peace.

It is amazing that our Congressmen seem to think that this struggle is a foolish little bicker. Apparently we want to be the heroes of the peace without taking the slightest responsibility or risk on behalf of anybody, including the neutrals. Why should we be?

FINALLY it is interesting to learn that the Department of State was not consulted by Senator Pittman before he made his speech. It would be more comfortable for us and for the rest of the world if the Department of State and the chairman of the Foreign Affairs committee in Congress would get together on the same policy.

Point Of Departure

By Barnet Nover

Beyond The Moscow Settlement

IN THE WELTER of discussion produced by the dramatic collapse of Finland's gallant resistance, a great deal is being said and written on the subject of what Russia's triumph means or may mean to Finland and Sweden, to Germany and the Allies, to Italy and the Balkan states. Surprisingly, however, very little has been said so far regarding the possible impact of this triumph on Russia herself.

The immediate effects of Finland's capitulation on Russia's position are clear and unmistakable. With the Karelian Isthmus in her possession, with Russian naval bases in Estonia and Latvia and now at Hangoe, Finland's Gibraltar, Russia is undisputed mistress of the Gulf of Finland and the eastern Baltic. She has also placed herself in a position where before very long she may dominate the Gulf of Bothnia, which separates the east central half of Sweden from Finland. And by extending her Arctic domain Russia also threatens the Scandinavian peninsula on the land side.

WHAT THIS MEANS to Finland, now reduced to a situation comparable to that of Czechoslovakia after Munich, and to Sweden is apparent. What is not so clear is the possible effect of the new status quo in northern Europe on German-Russian relations.

It is assumed, and with very good reason, that the collapse of Finland constitutes a real German triumph. But it may prove only a temporary triumph. It has eliminated the possibility of an Allied front in the North. And by releasing Russia from the effort imposed upon her by the effort to overcome Finnish resistance it may enable Germany to capitalize the Russian-German pact in a way that was impossible as long as the Finnish war went on.

At this point, however, it is necessary to look beyond the immediate situation to future possibilities. For these may prove by no means as favorable to the Third Reich as the present situation appears to be and to a very real extent certainly is.

AS LONG as the Finnish war went on, Russia had to consider one of two dangerous possibilities.

The first was that the Finns would hold out indefinitely, either by their own unaided efforts or with the indirect assistance given them by the outside world. That possibility involved at the very least a continued loss of prestige by the Red army and the Soviet government.

The second, and even more dangerous, possibility was that the Allies would actively go to war with Russia on behalf of Finland, using Finland as one but not necessarily the only base of operations against the Soviet Union.

For a long time France and particularly Great Britain were reluctant to take this step. By February 2, however, as Premier Daladier has revealed in the French Chamber of Deputies, this reluctance was overcome. But it was then too late. The offer of aid which London and Paris sent to Helsinki was never accepted.

America Abroad

THERE MUST BE some Americans abroad who would make interesting pieces," he said. "Go and find them; I'll pay." Mr. Wallace's only suggestion was that a Yankee was running a dude ranch among the pygmies in the Belgian Congo; it turned out that this gentleman was, at the moment, staying at the Harvard Club in New York City. Mr. Beatty visited him both there and in the Congo. "Americans All Over" (John Day, $3) tells engagingly of Mr. Beatty's star-spangled discoveries.

Accompanied by a long-suffering wife known as Dorothaea, he set out to see the world, and returned with a full cargo of yarns. He went to the Persian Gulf, and into the heart of Africa, on to the heart of China and down to the heart of the South Seas, and wherever he went he found busy Americans at work and loved them.

These are some of the Americans he chiefly loved, as various an assortment as any patriot ever assembled:

Alice Carr, a Red Cross nurse from Yellow Springs, Ohio, who, when the Athens, Greece, police said they could not enforce the sanitary regulations, organized the Greek market women to take care of things.

Boyd Comstock, a University of Southern California athlete who is coaching Mussolini's boys for the next Olympic games.

Jefferson Davis Dickson, Jr., once a barefoot boy in Natchez, Miss., who became the Tex Rickard of the continent and chief sports promoter of all France.

Bayard Dodge, New York copper millionaire, energetic president of the greatest university in the Near East (Beirut).

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, of Scribner, Nebr., Johns Hopkins Medical School, and Muscat, Iraq, who, not trusting the Arabs with chloroform, invented a superior technique of spinal anesthesia which he applies kneeling on a rug in the oases. He likes sheiks, but when he offered to drive Mr. Beatty into the desert to meet a second sheik, that 100-per-cent citizen replied: "No, thanks. I can still smell the first one."

Robert W. Hathaway, of East Orange, N. J., who by marriage became the Seigneur of Sark, and holds feudal court on a channel island.

Spencer Hatch, once of Saratoga, N. Y., and now of Y. M. C. A. auspices, chief exponent of scientific agriculture and baseball in India.

Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, of Boston, and of the American Embassy in London, who keeps track of her nine children by an elaborate card-catalogue system.

Dr. Sylvester Lambert, president and dean of the leading and only medical school in the Fiji Islands and once a citizen of Ellenville, N. Y.

Dr. Thomas Van Ess, of Chicago, N. Y., who, having spent 36 years among the Arabs, chiefly at Basra, isn't sure that he has converted one to Christianity, but is sure he has converted thousands to sanitation; and Harry Woods, of Eldorado, Kans., pilot in the Chinese air service.

The more lands Mr. Beatty saw, the more he liked America. He boasted to a banker in Budapest that his maid in Pelham had written to say she'd bought a second-hand automobile to drive from New York City to Minnesota. Off the coast of Arabia he outwitted the British passport authorities and landed on the oil island of Bahrain, and he chortles over the failure of the British rulers of that billion-dollar spot of sand to suspect the oil that American engineers found beneath its surface. When an Englishman told him that the Americans did not understand natives, being too chummy with them, and sometimes even getting up to help the dark-skinned fellows do manual labor, Mr. Beatty jeered—and the reader jeers, chuckles and cheers, too. For Mr. Beatty has a breezy, two-fisted way of telling a story.

I would advise Englishmen to read this book, however. Mr. Beatty makes large generalizations not precisely calculated to promote the hands-across-the-sea movement.

Our Military Secrets

By Ernest Lindley

Have We Been Giving Them Away?

ACCORDING TO WHAT is supposed to be official policy, an American-designed weapon or military contrivance is not released for export until our Army or Navy has something better in hand. This policy seems to be wearing suspiciously thin.

The Army has approved release of the brand-new Curtiss P-40 pursuit ship, credited with a speed of more than 400 miles an hour. A few weeks ago another fast pursuit ship, the Bell Airacobra, was released "for negotiation"—a step toward sale—before the Army had finished testing the first sample delivered to it. In each case, a few contrivances on the planes were withheld by the Army.

The Allies are clamoring for the release of half a dozen or more other new warplanes designed for our Army or Navy. In some instances, at least, their request may be granted.

ALSO IMPENDING is the release to the Allies of our best designs for antiaircraft equipment and our antitank gun. Our Army is lacking in both—lamentably so in antiaircraft units, which are extremely complex and therefore slow in manufacture.

The argument for releasing our antitank and antiaircraft equipment is twofold:

(1) They are defensive weapons. Since we do not intend to go to war in Asia or Europe they would not be used against us, even if they should fall into the hands of our potential enemies. The antiaircraft equipment will help to protect civilians as well as the factories, docks, ships and other behind-the-line defense of the Allies.

(2) Large foreign orders would enable factories in the United States to tool up for production of antitank guns and antiaircraft equipment, and thereby strengthen our own national defenses.

Both arguments carry weight. The distinction between offensive and defensive weapons is often hazy. But from the viewpoint of our own national defense, both antiaircraft and antitank guns seem to fall clearly on the defensive side. Of course, if the Western Hemisphere should be attacked we would prefer that the hostile fleet not be equipped with the best antiaircraft guns. But this consideration is remote and will remain so while the British navy remains in action in the Atlantic and while we have an ample fleet of our own. Besides, our antitank guns and antiaircraft equipment may not be markedly superior to those available elsewhere.

IF AMERICAN factories are going to tool up for the production of military weapons it is best that they do it for the weapons we want for our own use. In the World War our Army had to abandon the superior Springfield rifle in favor of a modification of the British Lee-Enfield rifle, because our small-arms plants were equipped to make the latter.

There is still another argument in favor of letting the Allies have some of our military gadgets. They have some of their own which we may want to use, and as the war continues and various weapons are tested and improved they may have more. Some of the improvements in artillery our Army is still using came from the French during the World War. By an exchange of information in a more or less intimate collaboration with the Allies, our defense, as well as theirs, may be strengthened. Only the experts in the Army and Navy are equipped to express an opinion on the value of such collaboration.

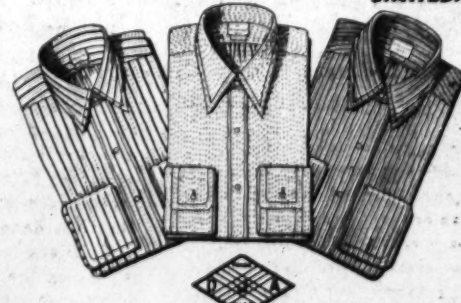

The Allies naturally want the best we have of whatever types of weapons they buy in this country, from pursuit planes to guns. In the improvement of aircraft, the advance is dazzling. Only a little more than a year has elapsed since the political flare-up over the revelation that French officers were being shown a fast attack bomber which had not yet been tested by our own Army. This plane was then the best of its type. But, according to aviation experts, it is already out of date.

For months it has been bruited that the Curtiss P-40 would be the fastest and most formidable pursuit ship in the world. Now, before it has come into use, it is released for export, with the semiofficial explanation that three or four other pursuit ships now on the way will outclass it.

ON FULL examination of the facts there may be no ground for criticism of any of the releases for export authorized so far or now impending. But there is a suspicion that the Army and the Navy are under pressure from higher up to go the limit in aiding the Allies. There is a good argument for this policy, too: If they win this war, our own national defense needs will be relatively modest, whereas if they lose we may have to go in for armament on a scale even greater than our present one. But this argument has not been officially advanced as a reason for giving away military secrets or departing from the policy of releasing no improvements until we have even better ones in hand for our own use.

Congress and the public are entitled to know what the official policy is. At present the whole business of releasing weapons for export is surrounded by half-way and conflicting explanations.

Alexandrian Sentenced After 2 RaidsFined $100, Given 6 Months at State Prison Farm For Whisky Sale

His place raided twice within a week by Virginia alcoholic beverage control board agents, Earle Posey, 43, of the 700 block of Gibbon street, yesterday at Alexandria was sentenced to six months at the State prison farm and was fined $100 and costs on a charge of violating the ABC act. Posey was convicted of illegal possession of whisky. Charges of illegal possession were dismissed by Judge James Reece Duncan.

Posey's establishment first was raided March 3, when he was charged with illegal sale and possession. While he was awaiting trial after being freed under $2,000 bond, the agents struck again March 14 and added a second charge of illegal possession.

Sam Pettigrew, of the 100 block of South St. Asaph street, who also was arrested in a raid March 3, was acquitted of illegal sale of whisky.

Body Found

The body of Melvin Devers, 40, of the 1800 block of Duke street, was found by Alexandria police yesterday in a house used as a children's play place less than a block from his home, following an anonymous telephone call to police headquarters. Coroner Jewell Powell said death was due to natural causes.

Dr. Powell said Devers apparently had been dead several hours. He was seen alive early yesterday. An employee of the Potomac railroad yard in Alexandria, Devers was unmarried and had made his home with his mother, Mrs. Silas Devers. He also is survived by two brothers, Leon and Frank Devers, of Alexandria, and a sister, Mrs. F. A. Sick, of Washington. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Rep. Gore to Speak

Representative Albert Gore, of Tennessee, will be the principal speaker at the Jackson Day dinner of Andrew Jackson Lodge of Masons at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, tonight, at 6:30. The dinner will be followed by an entertainment and dance.

Approximately 150 Masons and their guests are expected to attend the affair, which is one of the standing Masonic programs in the city. William H. Wood, Jr., is general chairman.

Among other speakers will be another Tennessee legislator, Representative Joseph Byrne, Jr., who will discuss "The Life of Andrew Jackson."

One of the highlights will be presentation of a master's jewel to Harry P. Shaffer, outgoing worshipful master, and the installation of these officers: Leonard B. Roland, worshipful master; Ray B. Coburn, Jr., senior warden; Samuel O. Turner, junior warden; W. H. Wood, Jr., treasurer; Oliver S. Stone, secretary; Josiah S. Evers, senior deacon; Edgar S. Bavel, junior deacon; James E. Clarkson, senior steward; George W. Wilson, junior steward; W. D. Wicker, tiler; Col. John H. Trimyer, chaplain, and W. H. Wood, Jr., lecturer.

Tax Office to Stay Open

Alexandria residents will be given until midnight tonight to file Federal income tax returns, as the result of a decision by Deputy Collector A. B. Richards to keep his office open until 12 o'clock for the convenience of late comers. The late hours were arranged principally to accommodate Alexandrians who are employed in Washington, and who would find it difficult to file returns before the normal closing hour of 5 p. m., Richards said.

Tax returns by mail must bear a March 15 postmark, the collector said.

A. T. Burke Dies In Silver Spring; GAO Examiner

Arthur T. Burke, 56, an examiner with special claims division of the General Accounting Office, died yesterday at his home, 610 Maryland avenue, Silver Spring, Md., after a day's illness.

He was born at Monrovia, Md., and taught at high schools in Kingston, N. Y., and Brunswick, Ga. He came to Washington to enter the Government service in the General Accounting Office 22 years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Burke; two sons, Arthur and George; two daughters, the Misses Hazel and Hilda Burke, all of Silver Spring; brother, A. Cole Burke, of Washington; his father, William H. Burke, of Monrovia, and a grandson.

Funeral services will be at the Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, at 1 p. m. Sunday. Burial will be in the Providence Methodist Church Cemetery, Kempstown, Md.

Takoma Park, Maryland, Gets Own Postoffice

For the first time in its 55-year history, Takoma Park, Md., today will have a postoffice of its own.

Opening officially this morning at 8 o'clock, the office is a personality procured project of Harry P. Williams, 606 Greenwood avenue, the postmaster, who for the past six years has been walking 2 miles to buy his stamps at the Takoma Park (D. C.) Postoffice.

Williams, who operates a real estate business on the side, induced the Government to open the substation when he was forced to deliver much postal business at the Washington Missionary College, where he served as cashier for five years.

Byron Speaks To Legion Post Of Takoma Park

Additional airplane orders from foreign countries are helping develop new American methods of production, Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, member of the House Military Affairs Committee, declared last night at the birthday celebration of the Takoma Park (Md.) American Legion Post.

Approximately 350 crowded the firehall to hear the address and view motion pictures of Byron's recent 16,000-mile airplane trip. Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, described the pictures and the trip.

Wilson Unit to Meet

A meeting of the new Annie M. Wilson unit of the Kensington, Md., branch of the Montgomery County Chapter, American Red Cross, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Kensington elementary school.

Montgomery Clears Way Budget Asked In ArlingtonFunds Transferred To State Welfare Board in Accordance With Agreement

Transfer of administration of general public assistance funds in Montgomery County, Md., from the supervisor of county aid to the county welfare board was ordered yesterday by the Montgomery County commissioners.

The transfer makes available $8,311 in State funds to match county funds. The law provides that the money must be administered by the welfare board, which is a State office.

At the same time, the commissioners ordered $2,000 transferred from the supervisor of county aid funds to the welfare board. This was the sum estimated to be needed for the direct relief work until the new law is signed July 1.

Additional funds will be provided for the welfare board in the levy. The supervisor of county aid, Mrs. Dorothy M. Kurtz, executive secretary of the welfare board, and Alfred D. Noyes, supervisor of county aid, were consulted in making arrangements for the transfer of the duties and funds, Hampton said.

The $8,311 allocated to the county by the State is available until September 30, end of the State fiscal year, and must be matched by like county funds. The money is not available if administered by a purely county office, but must be administered by the State-controlled welfare board.

The supervisor of county aid will continue to administer hospitalization, care of indigent children, pensions and other aid services for which no State or Federal funds are available.

Tax Meeting Called

A special meeting of the Silver Spring (Md.) Citizens Association to determine the group's action on the Montgomery County Civic Federation's proposal to increase the tax rate 15 cents to $1.15 per $100 valuation has been called for today, Stephen Tuhy, Jr., president, announced last night.

After discussion on the matter, the federation will be instructed to report at the special meeting of the federation next Tuesday night.

Comedy Tonight

Southern Md. 'Dust Pall' Laid To REA Contest

Special Dispatch to The Post
La Plata, Md., March 14.—Don't be alarmed! That pall you may have noticed in the vicinity of old La Plata in southern Maryland is not the Midwest type of dust storm.

The flying dust in Charles, St. Marys and Prince Georges counties is merely the result of a sudden demand for ancient lighting equipment. Paradoxical as it may seem, the demand is caused by a contest sponsored by the Tri-County Civic Association and the Rural Electrification Administration.

The contest, to be held in Chapel Point on May 6 and 7, will offer prizes for most novel conversions of ancient lighting equipment to modern electrical use. That's why the dust is flying in many attics and cellars. The women are dragging out nicker Rayo lamps, candlesticks, candelabra, hanging oil lamps and lanterns.

Miss Mary Graham, Charles County demonstration agent, has arranged for a meeting at the courthouse here on March 21 at 2 p. m., when Mrs. Elva S. Bohannon, REA lighting expert, will show how to convert old equipment.

River Ice Vanishes At Harpers Ferry

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., March 14.—All ice from the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers here at their confluence disappeared yesterday after having been in evidence since early in January and for a part of that time keeping the rivers locked with ice frozen solidly across.

The break-up occurred two weeks ago but gradually, doing no damage. Melting continued, with checks at night due to cold, and all evidence disappeared yesterday.

Stages of the water are near normal, after having been under somewhat due to rains and melting snow and ice.

W. Va. Inquiry Fails To Find Blast Cause

Charleston, W. Va., March 14 (AP).—The West Virginia Department of Mines gave up hope today of determining the cause of the Bartley Mine disaster which killed 91 men January 10 and marked its investigation "virtually closed."

Chief N. P. Rhinehart said, however, that the department would "keep its eyes open" for any clues to the source of the blast.

The Federal Bureau of Mines at Washington said the explosion "probably" was caused by sparks from faulty electric equipment.

A birthday cake was presented to Commander C. Earl Thomas by Mrs. B. R. Petty, 77-year-old mother of Past Commander E. Brook Petty, chairman of the arrangements. The post auxiliary served refreshments with Mrs. E. Brooks Petty, Mrs. Walter Hawley and Mrs. A. R. Lind as hostesses.

Former Marlboro Cashier Gets 18 Months as EmbezzlerSeipp, Who Gave Self Up to Authorities, Says He Took the Money to Pay Hospital Bills for Wife, Children

Special Dispatch to The Post
Baltimore, Md., March 14.—William Edgar Seipp, 43, former cashier of the County Trust Company at Upper Marlboro, Md., today was sentenced to 18 months in prison after pleading guilty to embezzlement of $16,000.

Judge W. Calvin Chestnut, in United States District Court, imposed the sentence after Seipp had testified he took the bank funds to pay doctor and hospital bills for his wife and three children. He will serve his sentence at the Federal Penitentiary, Lewisburg, Pa.

Seipp disappeared from the bank February 8, 1937, the day examiners arrived for a routine check of the accounts. Shortages were discovered several days later and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

An incident, charging Seipp with embezzlement, was returned by a federal grand jury in Baltimore in October, 1937. He was not heard of, however, until last February 3, when he surrendered to Federal authorities at Seattle.

Seipp told police he had earned a living for three years by working as a field hand. He said he had traveled from place to place on freight cars.

Dovell Blames Uniform Rates Cost for Defeat Urged for State Of Prison Bill Welfare Taxes

Gilkeson's Charge Of 'Politics' Held Unfounded
By The Associated Press
Richmond, Va., March 14.—Charges by Sheriff G. M. Gilkeson, of Augusta County, that "political activities" killed the jail reform program in the General Assembly drew replies today from Speaker Ashton Dovell and several other legislators.

Dovell said many factors entered into "postponement" of action on the bill to abolish the fee system of compensating sheriffs and place the officers on salaries, one of which was the bill would have added many deputy sheriffs.

He cited the fact that in recent years the State police force had been increased, that at this year's session of the Assembly the troopers' salaries were increased and that fire wardens, game wardens and other law enforcement officials were "adding the counties with police." There was no definite assurance, he said, that the bill wouldn't have cost the localities money.

Charge "Unfounded"

Dovell added that the sheriff's bill was "no new program designed by Gov. Price and the charge of 'political activities' back to the V's session of the Assembly was unfounded. Conditions were such that 'if there had been a vote (in the Assembly) on an amendment to the Lord's Prayer, someone would have voted against the votes as either Byrd or Price votes.'

Meanwhile, Gov. Price said last night that he would refer the entire ten-reform subject back to the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council with the request that a new program be worked out for consideration of the 1942 General Assembly.

The chief executive yesterday vetoed his administration-sponsored bill setting up a division of corrections because, he said, "sinister and selfish interests" had killed the "constructive provisions" of the measure.

The Governor said he had been told by the attorney general that he saw no legal way the division of corrections could be financed under terms of the legislation. A companion bill to provide the necessary finances (H. B. 10) died in the last hours of the Assembly.

Fee System Condemned

The Assembly also killed a measure designed to abolish the fee system, which action the Governor commented:

"The fee system as applied to the State's jailers has been universally condemned as a vicious political instrumentality for the exploitation not only of the State treasury but of the human beings who annually and in increasing numbers pass through our local jails. The jail fee system is an outmoded relic of barbarism.

"The fight for the abolition of the fee system is a fight for the abolition of the fee system."

Arlington Weighs Cuts In SpeedsHearing Is Set On Ordinance Made Possible By Legislature

Authorized by the Virginia Legislature to regulate speeds on State highways, the Arlington County Board of Supervisors yesterday had before it an ordinance lopping 15 miles an hour from top speeds on the county's newest trafficway.

Hearings on the ordinance, prepared by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, were set for March 30. Arlington is the only county in Virginia with the right to change speed control on through routes.

Should the ordinance be adopted, as expected, maximum speeds will be:

Lee boulevard, from Arlington Ridge road to Carlin Springs road, 40 miles an hour instead of 55 from Carlin Springs road to Fairfax County line, 55 miles.

On the following State highways, 25 miles an hour instead of 35: South Glebe road from South Lang street to South Adams street; United States Route 1, from Columbia Pike to Alexandria City line; Old Dominion drive, from North Glebe road to Fairfax County line; Washington boulevard, from North Buchanan street to North Roosevelt street.

On the following highways, 30 miles an hour: Lee highway, from Fort Myer drive to North Dinwiddie street; Arlington Ridge road, from Army-Navy drive to the Alexandria City line.

On county roads, 25 miles an hour, except as otherwise provided.

Special Dispatch to The Post
Hagerstown, Md., March 14.—Melvin C. Pearnan, 21, of near Williamsport, Md., killed last night when the automobile in which he and two other youths were riding collided with the rear of a coal truck, was Washington County's first automobile fatality of 1940.

Norman Malott, 19, and Albert F. Wine, 20, both of Williamsport, are in the Washington County Hospital with serious injuries. The car in which the three were riding hit the loaded truck operated by Donald McCauley, 24, of near this city, on the Williamsport pike.

Jean Bennett Finds Time in Busy Career to Build a Happy Home

Active Club Woman Believes in Diversity

Mission Official, Gives Credit, However, For Ability to Maintain Apartment to Julia, Her Maid, Who Makes Delicious Nut Bread

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

Martha Ellyn in the first rank, but she also has time to make a home for her father and mother, be a "mother" to a foster daughter and carry on her work as an ardent club member.

Visiting with her recently in her attractive apartment in the Mary Farr Perry Memorial, where she served excellently brewed tea and delicious sandwiches, I realized why she remains cheerful and attractive with all her serious duties and responsibilities. Charming of personality and mindful of correct grooming, she also has magnetism that draws one to her. No doubt these characteristics have done much to carry her through her busy life.

Was President of Two Clubs

And a busy life it is. In addition to her work as superintendent, she is a leader in women's clubs. In 1939 she was president of both the Washington Sororist Club and the Women's City Club. She is a past regional director of the South Atlantic American Federation of Sororists, a member of the Business and Professional Women's Club and vice president of the International Union of Gospel Missions. In 1935 Mrs. Bennett was chairman of the Women's Division of the Federal Housing Administration and with a spade presented her by Speaker Byrnes, turned the first spade of dirt in behalf of this organization's activities.

For the past three years every Saturday night, from 8:30 to 9, Mrs. Bennett has announced a broadcast from Station WOL, bringing to its listeners a part of the services held at the mission chapel, and music by the Mission Glee Club and Quartet. Jean Bennett has a great love for children. Losing her daughter some years ago she has contributed much to the comfort of unfortunate children's lives. Jo Ann Martin, a 16-year-old high school girl, makes her home with Mrs. Bennett. A charming, modest and intelligent girl, Jo Ann hopes to be a nurse when she finishes her high school work. The Children's Emergency Home was founded by Mrs. Bennett. In this home 40 children are cared for and in the summer, Mrs. Bennett takes 88 children each two weeks to the Camp Bennett at Brookville, Md., for recreation and advancement.

Credit for the Maid

Mrs. Bennett gives credit to her competent colored maid, Julia, who has been with her ten years, as one of the reasons she is able to maintain a home along with her many responsibilities. She also said that she makes an effort not to become so absorbed in her work that many other worthwhile things of life are crowded out and thinks that she is able to do her work because of her diversified interests.

The sandwiches Mrs. Bennett served with her tea were made by Julia. I came away with the recipe for the nut bread used in making some of the sandwiches. This is the way Julia makes them.

Nut Bread

Beat until soft 2 tablespoons butter. Add 1/4-cup sugar and blend until creamy. Sift before measuring 2 cups of bread flour. Resift with 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder and 2-3 teaspoon salt. Beat until light 1 egg, then add 1 cup milk and beat. Stir the liquid into the dry ingredients until blended only. Add 1/4-cup broken nut meats. Place the dough in greased pan. Bake the bread in a moderate oven, 375 degrees for about half-hour.

Rolling tea sandwiches are another kind Mrs. Bennett serves with tea. She likes cream cheese and olive filling and makes them according to the following directions.

Afternoon tea is a pleasant custom. Mrs. Jean Bennett, widely known social worker and club woman, is shown in the picture above as she served tea in her apartment and told of the interesting work she is doing at the Central Union Mission.

Canned Asparagus

Fine for Salads

Canned asparagus lends itself to a great variety of salad combinations. It is excellent served alone on lettuce, with any desired salad dressing. Mayonnaise is probably the best liked dressing for this, although a well seasoned French dressing, to which a bit of chopped onion, green pepper and pimiento have been added, makes a delightful variation.

Asparagus and Celery Salad may be made of 1 No. 2 can asparagus tips, 2 cups of celery cubes, 1 Spanish onion chopped, lettuce or romaine. Marinate the asparagus and celery in separate dishes, using a well-seasoned French dressing for this purpose. Put them in a cold place and let them stand an hour in the dressing. Drain, and arrange on the lettuce, adding a well-seasoned mayonnaise. Sprinkle the onion over the mayonnaise or boiled dressing, as desired. Garnish with radishes, cut to resemble roses. Serves six.

RECIPE

COMBINATION MEAT AND SPAGHETTI MOUNDS—Cut round steak into servings, then score or pound until tissue of steak is well severed. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Fry on both sides in shallow fat until brown. Top each piece of steak with a mound of Heinz Cooked Spaghetti. Add just enough water to bring up the brown from the skillet, then cover and simmer on top of stove or bake in a moderate oven (375°F.) 1/4 hour or until steak is tender. Serve garnished with watercress.

THERE'S everything to make a balanced meal in Heinz Cooked Spaghetti! Tender spaghetti strands prepared from finest semolina flour—rich cheese, and a racy sauce of pedigreed Heinz tomatoes. Save money—save time! Heinz Cooked Spaghetti is all ready to heat and serve!

HEINZ COOKED SPAGHETTI

A Woman's New York

Window Display
Now Has Code
Of Art With

New York, March 14.
YOU may think that if you own a fancy store fronting on our Fifth Avenue somewhere in the fabulous Fifties, what you put in your store's windows is strictly your business. That if you want to install a couple of natty three beautiful models in swim suits to halt the passer-by, it is up to you. Well it isn't by any manner of means. The contents of Fifth Avenue windows is strictly the business of the Fifth Avenue Association, which is headed by Walter Hoving, a store president himself.

That outfit can be pretty tough when somebody steps out of what they think is the party line. You may not believe it, but until five or six years ago no swishy store in the class shopping belt used window dummies with heads—just torsos. If you please. When a store finally came out with beautiful heads on its window mannequins, the news ran like a forest fire through the rag business. It was as breath-taking as the first steamboat.

The association now has a department of window display standards, headed by Miss Jean McLaren, a specialist in this field. For many years both motion and sound were forbidden in these sacred windows, but at Christmas, 1938, the avenue went crazy and broke every known rule. One great store filled every window with golden bells and their pealing could be heard across the street. This caused a tremendous fuss. Finally, the association realized that it was living in the fourth decade of the Twentieth Century, and motion is permitted in the windows—but sound, however innocent, which can be heard on the sidewalk, is still under the ban.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—John Mason Brown, our handsome dramatic critic who also picks up a few pounds every year by lecturing, comes back from a tour of the Midwest giving our civic pride a nasty knock. Specifically, the dream man of the aisle seats says that the Chicago production of the year's great comedy, "Life with Father," is superior to the one now playing to standees at the Empire Theater on Broadway. He points to the Chicago performance of Mr. Percy Waram, as father, and Lillian Gish, as Vinnie, as being very fine indeed. Our troupe is good, but Brother Brown likes the Windy City lot better.

Warm, Pink Tones Are What Make Skin Attractive

Hollywood, Calif.—A skin pale as a magnolia blossom may have some poetic value in books but in reality it appears lifeless and uninteresting. The most beautiful skin is one with some red undertones. If these are not possessed naturally, makeup, diet and certain apparel colors help achieve the effect.

Use a foundation cream at least one shade darker than the skin and with plenty of warm pink tones in it. Powder should be just a bit lighter than the foundation, with less of the red tones. We don't advocate anyone destroying the translucent look that is so attractive. Be sure the foundation is set before applying the powder. Otherwise the skin will have a blotched appearance. Lipstick should be a clear, true red.

Learn to Play The Piano

MEN LIKE a girl who can keep the fun bubbling! And when you know how to play the piano you're always ready to entertain—with popular tunes, favorite dance music.

Fortunately, learning to play isn't nearly as difficult as you may think. By an interesting new method you quickly learn to read music, to master the keyboard.

For your beginning lessons you have a chart which you slip behind the piano keys. This chart has an exact, full-sized "picture" of the keys commonly used for popular music. The keys on your chart fit directly behind the matching keys on the piano.

To find what key to strike, you look at your music. Is the first note of the melody staff right below the line? You look for that note on the lower staff of your chart. Above it is the key you strike. No. 2. If the note is a flat or a sharp, you find it on the

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Fiance Gradually Becomes Wastrel, Gambler, Drunkard; Is She 'Failing' Him? If So, How?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My fiance and I have been engaged for several years, and while we have several times set a definite date for marriage, there has always been some financial difficulty or illness to prevent it. At first, we seemed to mean a great deal to each other. But lately there's something wrong and I begin to wonder if we could be happy even if we married.

My fiance drinks heavily and while I'm not a prude about drinking, I do believe in self-control. He gambles; plays poker several nights a week until all hours; spends most of his leisure time at "beer joints," and has given up church work. I can't help thinking that the money he throws away should be saved for our marriage.

I am not afraid to face marriage on a limited budget, but I am afraid to face it when I am not reasonably sure of my partner's dependability. I have tried to mention this to him but he said he was enjoying himself and thought I was mean and selfish to begrudge him any pleasure he could find. He demands an account of all my actions but doesn't want to tell me about his. Nor will he try to like any of the things I like.

I suggested breaking the engagement but he seemed so hurt, and protested his love for me so convincingly, that I didn't. He said he would reform after marriage. But I don't believe in "reforming" people; I think persons should be decent for the sake of decency; so I find it hard to accept his promise. When he isn't drinking, he is kind and generous, but the life he is leading is ruining his health and I'm sure must detract from his work.

I've thought a great deal about making my married life happy and I realize that I have much to learn; but I feel that I have a right to expect my fiance to do his part in saving money and living on a higher plane than at present. I am beginning to doubt his love for me. Could he love me and behave as he does? He is 26, and should have outlived the "wild oats" stage and be ready to assume responsibility.

It would hurt greatly to give him up, as I have been loyal for several years and there aren't many eligible men in our small town. But I do want to get something worthwhile from life and we just don't have any mental companionship. He didn't use to be like this, and I feel that I must have failed him in some way, or he wouldn't drink so much. I try to understand his mood; have learned to like some of the things he enjoys and to guard my tongue closely so as not to irritate him. Perhaps you can show us who is at fault, and in what way. Your opinions and suggestions will be appreciated.

CONFUSED.

It's too bad there are few eligible men in your small town, but that's no excuse for marrying a fellow who would turn your life into a constant headache. Aside from his weakness of character, which is reason enough for not wedding him, there is the further ominous fact—already so clearly indicated—that you have nothing in common, intellectually and socially.

He lives, as you say, on an altogether different (and lower) plane than you, and this difference will be increasingly emphasized as your feelings wear.

The spiritual tragedy which follows when a superior woman marries a man of limited scope is prophetically told in Tennyson's "Locksley Hall," in these words: "Thus it shall be; thou shalt lower to his level, day by day, what is fine within thee growing coarse to sympathize with clay. As the husband is the wife is; thou art mated with a clown, and the grossness of his nature shall have weight to drag thee down."

Svelte Tip: Limit Liquid At Mealtime

It Expands Stomach And Makes Room For More Food

By Ida Jean Kain

NEXT time you go out to dinner with a man—eat! It seems that man's pet aversion is the woman who is "on a diet."

He probably likes to do the ordering. And when he asks what you like, it is patently your cue to say, "Why, your order, Cary"—assuming Mr. Grant is your escort—and believe me, he won't miss a calorie!

But if you know what's good for you, you'll eat! Eating is manifestly a social function. Dieting is something you do alone. Like crying. Unless you want to insult your host, you will enjoy your food so that he can feel he has made the evening a success.

Thumbs Down
If your man is a gourmand, you may take it for granted that he considers himself a gourmet. But if you diet while he dines, he is not so sure—and it is upsetting to his peace of mind.

The thumbs down policy on dieting is merely another man's endeavoring inconsistencies. Most of them put a woman permanently on the fence. When a man proclaims that he likes to see a woman eat, she has to read his mind to know what he really means. Is he doesn't want to see her diet. That is an entirely different matter. And when a man avers that he likes a girl to have "some meat on her bones," it only takes a bit of sleuthing to discover that the ones he takes out are streamlined!

The smart thing, aside from courtesy, is to spare your friends as much on your diet as possible. Too much fanfare is made about diet in the first place! The whole thing has been played up too much. A girl can keep her weight under control simply as a matter of habit, there are a few basic rules which, in the long run, determine whether or not the weight stays where it belongs.

Easy on the Salt

One of the first of these is the habit of trimming the fat from the meat. That can be done any time—and it should be! You can have twice as much lean meat for the same number of calories that you can if the fat were left on. Another keeping svelte tip is to limit the mealtime liquids to one glass per meal—and that applies to all liquids. If you wash the food down with water, it stimulates the appetite, stretches the stomach, and makes room for more food.

Closely connected with this rule is one which restricts the use of salt. Salt sparingly to keep slim. In the first place, salt makes you thirsty. Moreover, it holds water in the tissues—it makes you waterlogged!

One of the never-to-be-broken rules should be: Fruit for dessert. If you take any other kind, stick to the low calorie group. Many gourmets prefer cheese with fruit, sherberts, or such delicacies as grapefruit with brandy. None of these is high in calories.

You won't be popular if you diet when you are invited to dine—but you're not as likely to be invited to dine tele-a-tele if you are fat! The best solution is to make a habit of the keeping slim rules that cut down on calories without restricting your diet.

Appetizer

Try this new, colorful appetizer for luncheon or dinner: mould cleaned, cooked shrimps in a tart gelatin. Add some chipped seasonings such as celery, green peppers and pimientos. Pour into a mould and chill. Cut into inch cubes and serve several to a portion in small sherbert cups. Top with cocktail sauce. This makes a delicious prelude to a holiday meal.

Mrs. Bartholomew Mink and Mrs. Otis Tinfoil hurriedly took off by plane yesterday for Nassau in the hopes of getting in a few days there before the season completely closes, so that they may hold their own conversationally in the post-Easter gayety. Mrs. Mink and Mrs. Tinfoil will return by plane early next week.

Marine Art

Society came out of its Lenten seclusion last night to attend a preview at the Neo-Modern Art Gallery of the fish exhibit of Mr. Philander Plunkette, who has been Mr. Plunkette's trophies, stuffed and mounted, were caught by him single-handed—with only the aid of his fishing guide. Printed leaflets containing scientific descriptions of each fish, also weights and measurements, were given the guests at the preview. Feminine guests "Oh-ed" and "Ah-ed" in great rapture as they viewed the fish specimens through their lorgnettes.

Mr. Plunkette gave an informal lecture detailing his experiences in catching the fish. The exhibit will remain open throughout next week, Mr. Plunkette speaking daily.

With The Gourmets

Mr. Nicholas Bainbridge Put-

ter, noted bon vivant and raconteur, won a prize at the Housewives' Food Fair last week with his lemon meringue pie a la Montezuma.

Mr. J. Hollingsworth Drupp, who always entertains so delightfully at his modernistic apartment, was host last night at a dinner prepared entirely by himself after the guests arrived. While the guests looked on fascinatedly, Mr. Drupp prepared a rare onion soup, broiled a steak, mixed a salad and even made an apple pie. The guests, who assembled at 7:30, sat down to the feast about 11 p. m. Following the dinner, Mr. Drupp took his guests on a tour of his etchings.

Mr. Caesar DeBilk is reported to have left for Reno following a controversy with his wife over culinary matters. Mr. DeBilk, a noted connoisseur of food, is understood to have strode out of his house never to return, following a dinner served by Mrs. DeBilk at which the wine was not cooled to just the right temperature, at which the salad dressing contained a fraction too much oil, and at which one of the seasonings was left out of the capon stuffing. Mr. DeBilk is widely known as an expert in the making of creamed crab.

Guess Who

What glamorous deb of the current season is looking around aggressively for an eligible bridegroom?

What millionaire widow who has recently taken an apartment here has her eye out for a potential husband with Cabinet or ambassadorial possibilities? What wealthy feminine visitor is looking around for a charity with social prestige to become interested in?

What hostess is trying to decide which Presidential candidate's

"There she is, over by the punch bowl."

"No, that's Adele Van Hunk—and besides he turban's geraniums."

"Say, who is that stunning-looking woman with Adele—in the petunia pillbox?"

"I don't know—Wait, there's Grace!"

"No, that's not her turban—that's morning glories. Don't you love that pink rose turban?"

"Which one?"

Representative and Mrs. Colgate W. Darden, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Austin Clark and Dr. Lucille Dooley are among the patrons for the benefit of Lucille Barrow Turner, Southern singer, composer and mimic, tonight in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel at 8:30 o'clock. This benefit is for the benefit of the student loan fund of Randolph-Macon College for Women.

A number of parties are being arranged by members of the Washington alumnae of this college for the benefit of this evening. Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Sheffey 2d will take a group of guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Bramhall, Mrs. Charles H. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hamilton, Miss Sarah V. Barrow, Miss Mabel G. Haller and Miss Mary E. North.

Mrs. Meade Stull will take a party of eight to the program and later to supper at her home in Arlington County. Her guests will include Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Miller, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Mulford, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Root, and Mr. John Jacobs.

This benefit program in a way replaces the annual banquet always given near Founders' Day, March 12, by local alumnae of this college, which is nearing its half-century mark.

Those in charge of tickets for this event include, under Mrs. Aigernon S. Gardiner, Jr., Mrs. Preston Edsall, Mrs. Raymond Soderberg, Miss Margaret Foley, Miss Susan Richmond, Mrs. Edward F. Sheffey 2d, Mrs. W. L. Bageant, Mrs. H. L. Savage and Miss Louise Copenhaver.

Prepare for Coming Sorority Convention

Preparing for the national convocation of Delta Kappa Gamma Educational Sorority at Wardman Park Hotel Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, are Dr. Margaret Stroh, head of the English department of Wilson Teachers' College, president of the local group and chairman of the convention; Miss Margaret Patterson, president of Alpha Chapter, and Miss Louise Moore, president of Beta.

Kensington Club To Hear Children

The Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Art will present the program at the meeting of the Kensington Club of Washington this afternoon at the home of Mrs. William H. Ronsaville, Washington street, Kensington. Sonia Katz and Marie Hess will give a scene from "Mary Stuart." Raymond McCutcheon will give the monodrama, "Darn Girls," and Suzanne Brame, the monodrama, scenes from "Mary Poppins."

Mrs. Thorpe Tells Of Auto Instruction

Stresses Importance of Teaching Youths Safe Driving Before They Get Permits; Course Is Given at Abbot School

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Staff Editor

"Teaching our young people to drive before they receive drivers' permits is winning the battle for safety in the first trenches." This slogan, originated by Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the Woman's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association, in hearings before the House and Senate subcommittees on appropriations, was the subject of a talk at a luncheon meeting of the League of Republican Women.

Introduced by Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, Mrs. Thorpe emphasized the value of instruction in both the theory and practice of safe driving for young people of high school age. The Woman's Safety Committee was responsible for the idea of establishing a drivers' course in Abbot Vocational School. This was the objective of the committee last year and one for which Mrs. Thorpe appeared before both the Senate and House subcommittees on appropriations.

As a result, an active class of boys has now had 52 hours in a demonstration car and 8 hours each behind the wheel, under expert instruction. The car is provided through the generosity of the American Automobile Association.

This year the woman's safety committee and the men's advisory board have as their objective, she said, the extension of the appropriation for driving instruction, to include one white and one colored high school and one colored vocational school. Mrs. Thorpe will appear before the House subcommittee on appropriations in a few days in support of this.

As valuable as instruction in the theory of driving has been since its integration into the school program, she said it was recognized as necessary to have it supplemented by actual driving courses.

Emphasizing the imperative need for safe driving, Mrs. Thorpe pointed out that the motor registration in the United States is 2 1/4 times as large as in all the rest of the world put together. The average registration throughout the United States is one car for every five persons, but in the District, it is one to every three. In the fashionable suburb of Spring Valley, it rises to two cars to every one resident.

This density of vehicular traffic, plus a high-speed potentiality, has had a direct bearing on current traffic fatalities and casualties, she pointed out.

Within the last ten years, the fatalities related to the high-school age group have increased 130 per cent; those involving the college group, 157 per cent, and those of the middle-aged group, 160 per cent. Only is a decrease to be found in admittedly the most helpless group, those from 4 to 14 years of age, which shows a drop of 25 per cent in fatalities.

Mrs. Thorpe ascribed this decrease first to the schoolboy patrols, of which there are 275,000 in the country, who daily direct 8,000,000 of their classmates over the intersections, and second to the class instruction sponsored by the elementary schools by the American Automobile Association.

So successful was the result of this education among the elementary grades, that the safety department of the A. A. A. in conjunction with foremost educators in this country, brought out an advanced series for classroom work, known as "The Sportsmanlike Driving Series," which is used in the high schools.

Among the many guests at the luncheon yesterday were Mrs. Robert H. Taft, Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. Hamilton Fish and Mrs. Clarence Hancock.

Nazis Not Starving, Lecturer Tells Woman's Democratic Club

The German people are living on an unbalanced diet but they are by no means starving, Lothrop Stoddard, author and lecturer, told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club last night. Addressing them at their Thursday dinner at the clubhouse, he offered himself as proof of his assertion.

"I gained 12 pounds while in Germany," he said, "and, although I have peeled off some of it since, I have done it without dieting in any way, which would indicate there is an overabundance of starch in the German diet."

Mrs. David Tucker Brown, president of the club, introduced Mr. Stoddard. He said he saw in Germany absolutely no signs of emaciation or starvation. He pointed out that they had not been so well off for several years, so far as food is concerned, and probably are used to it.

Mr. Stoddard went into Germany to interview Hitler and did not come out until he had succeeded. Moreover, he had chats with Goebbels, minister of propaganda, and Himmler, head of the secret police. He had to confess that personally, they proved cordial and friendly and gave him gracious receptions.

In view of the big "build-up" which confronted him on his visit to the gorgeous new chancery in Berlin, Mr. Stoddard said he had expected to find the Fuehrer stiff and formal. The chancery is architecturally imposing with flunkies in blue and silver uniforms around, and he looked for much ceremony. On the contrary, he said, Hitler left his desk at the far end of the magnificent hall, advanced to meet him and gave him a 20-minute interview on a plane of informality and friendliness. The speaker compared it also to the occasion when he interviewed Mussolini and had to walk the entire length of an immense room while Il Duce just sat and looked at him.

Mr. Stoddard described Goebbels as a slight, small man, typical of the Rhineland country from which he came, with an alert mind and a sense of humor.

His visit to the headquarters of the Gestapo, to see Himmler, he said, was one of the most interesting experiences of his stay in Germany, as the central office of the dreaded secret police looked just like any big, modern, efficient office, with stenographers clicking

Miss Ida Pruitt To Give Talk On Chinese

Invitations Issued To Address Tuesday At Chevy Chase

Mrs. Frederick Ernest Farrington has issued invitations for a showing of Rex Scott's natural color film "China's Comeback," and a talk by Miss Ida Pruitt, of Peiping and Hongkong, on the "Chinese Industrial Cooperatives." The program will be presented in the auditorium of the Chevy Chase Junior College, Tuesday evening, at 8:30, after which Mrs. Farrington will give a reception for her guests.

Mrs. Lin Yu Tang, wife of the noted Chinese author, has described "China's Comeback" as "the most beautiful picture ever to come out of China." The film is a poignant screen story in natural colors. It covers China's march along the road to modern civilization; China's desperate struggle and rapid progress toward industrial reorganization, economic reconstruction and refugee rehabilitation. The part of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives also is portrayed in the film. The picture was made by Rex Scott, war correspondent and Life cameraman. Mr. Scott parallels the picture with running comments.

Miss Pruitt, chairman of the promotion committee of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, has come recently from Hongkong where she was associated with the international committee of the movement. Before joining the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives Miss Pruitt was for 20 years the head of the social service department of the Rockefeller Hospital of the Peiping Union Medical College. She was born in China and has spent most of her life there.

She has a first-hand story to tell of this new movement to help Chinese help themselves. Nearly 3,000 local cooperative units have been established in the less than two years the movement has been in existence.

Mrs. Farrington will use Chinese cakes, candies and tea as a part of the supper which she will serve at the reception. She will be assisted in serving by a group of women from the Chinese Embassy and community.

Plaque Presented to Hospital Honors Retiring Mrs. Weller

Head of Recreational Work in the Ward
At Children's Leaves After 16 Years;
Junior League Volunteers Pay Tribute

A bronze plaque honoring Mrs. Mary Weller, who is retiring after 16 years of service in charge of recreational work in the ward of Children's Hospital, was presented to the hospital yesterday afternoon by Junior League volunteers who have been associated with her during recent years.

The presentation was made when the plaque was unveiled by Loel Follensby, a 4-year-old patient. It has been placed on the door of the playroom. The members of the Junior League, inspired by the example of Mrs. Weller's work, desired to present the plaque in her honor to perpetuate the ideals which she has carried out in her long period of service at the institution.

The Junior League members who presented the gift were Miss Fontaine Flannery, Miss Virginia Flannery, Miss Isabelle Ogilby, Mrs. Allen E. Walker, Jr., and Miss Lesley Burchell.

A tea followed the simple presentation ceremony. Among those attending were Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent of the hospital; Mrs. Ridley McLean, who endowed the playroom in memory of her mother; hospital alumnae who had special training under Mrs. Weller; members of the ladies' board, including Mrs. William W. Mackall, chairman of the Junior League Children's Hospital advisory committee; Mrs. Louis F. Peak, chairman of Junior League volunteers working at the hospital; Miss Sidney Beall, Miss Dudley Gregory, and Miss Ann Dudley Flannery.

Grandmothers From Many Parts of U. S.
To Visit Washington Early in April

GRANDMOTHERS are on the march and they're coming to Washington! The National Grandmothers Club, headed by Mrs. Marie K. Brown, of Chicago, is organizing grandmothers from all parts of the Nation for a trip to Washington the first four days in April. They aren't coming to ask for pensions for themselves, reforms for the rest of us or special privileges for their grandchildren—they're just coming on a visit to see the cherry blossoms, the Capitol, Mount Vernon, the Washington Monument and the White House.

Don't get the idea that the grandmothers are going to be old ladies with bonnets tied under their chins, either. To give you an idea who some of the grandmothers are that belong to the club we have a few right here in Washington. There are such leaders as Mrs. Seidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation; Mrs. Virginia White Speer, Republican National Committee woman for the District; Mrs. Kratt Kerans, president of the District Society, Daughters of Founders and Patriots.

Others are Mrs. Margaret H. Haney, Mrs. James T. Howard, Mrs. Roberta E. Jacobs, Mrs.

Daniel Lee Moorman, Mrs. John C. Shaw, Mrs. Carrie A. Stillions, Mrs. Josephine Talks, Mrs. Harriet Vaughn Rigdon and Mrs. William M. Collins.

Mrs. Dunbar, unfortunately, will not be here to greet the other grandmothers when they come to the Capital. She leaves a week from tomorrow for a month's trip taking her to seven States. She will go first to Arizona to attend the conference of the State Federation; from there to Missouri to be present at a meeting at Stephens College dealing with consumers' problems; then to Michigan, Arkansas, Ohio, Tennessee and Alabama, to attend the federation conventions in each of those States. She will return to Washington April 19.

AND—speaking of the activities of the general federation president, she will receive members of the Forest Park Club, of Baltimore, Tuesday at headquarters, 1734 N street.

NEWCOMB CLUB MEETS—The Newcomb Club, of Bethesda, will be addressed by Dr. W. M. Gewehr, of American University, at its luncheon meeting today at the Highlands. He will be presented by Mrs. Roger H. Eisinger, chairman of the international relations section, and will speak on "Some Aspects of the Present International Situation." Mrs. William N. Morell, the president, will preside, and hostesses will be Mrs. A. C. Foster, Mrs. William H. Swanger and Mrs. H. H. Curry.

OHIO GIRLS' BANQUET—Mrs. John M. Vorpy, wife of Representative Vorpy, of the Twelfth District of Ohio, will be the guest speaker tomorrow night at the fourteenth annual banquet of the Ohio Girls Club of Washington. The dinner will be held at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson place, at 7 o'clock, with Arista Huber, a past president, as chairman. She will be assisted by Mrs. Florence Shockey, Irene Neikirk, Rosanna Robuck and Josephine Daily, who is in charge of the music.

Mrs. Vorpy will talk on India, where she was born and lived until she was 15.

TEA FOR OFFICERS—State officers of the District D. A. R. will be guests of honor at a tea being given tomorrow afternoon by Keystone Chapter at the home of its regent, Mrs. J. D. Skinner. Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, noted etcher, will present the afternoon's program, talking on "Historic Trees in Washington" and illustrating with a display of her etchings.

Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent, will not be able to attend as she is in Trenton, N. J., today, where she will address the State conference of the New Jersey D. A. R. and will not return to Washington until Sunday. Yesterday and Wednesday she attended the Maryland State conference in Baltimore.

CHANGE PLANS—The D. C. Council and ten local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi have canceled their plans for a luncheon at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow, but will meet at 4:30 p. m. instead, at the Madrilion Restaurant for a cocktail party.

Society Leaders To Hear Lecture By Horticulturist

A number of well-known women are on the list of sponsors for a lecture to be given next Tuesday afternoon by E. Y. Morrison, president of the American Horticulture Society. He will discuss the National Arboretum, of which he is head. The lecture will be given at the Sulgrave Club at 3 p. m.

Among those who have bought tickets are Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. John W. Burke, Mrs. Arthur Chichester, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. H. G. Gillmor, Mrs. Louis Greene, Miss Bell Gurnee, Mrs. Francis Hager, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. John Hinder.

Miss Aiton Tells Of Educating Citizens-to-Be

The work of the Americanization School which has had 2,000 students enrolled during the year... a group representing more than 50 nationalities... was described yesterday by Miss Maude Aiton, the principal, in a talk before the civics education section of the Twentieth Century Club. She spoke at the morning meeting in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. and was introduced by Mrs. McFall Kerby, vice chairman of the section.

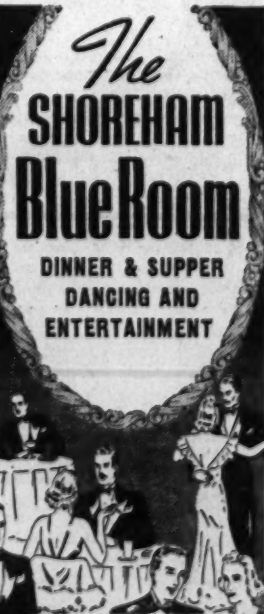

Although there are many activities along educational lines, the chief function of the school, said Miss Aiton, is to prepare applicants for citizenship to meet the tests imposed under the naturalization laws of the United States. There are three sections in the school. The first, a reading and writing section, is for those who speak English, but neither read or write it. The second, the English section, is for those who come to learn to speak the language. The third is the course of preparation for citizenship. In this, students are taught the American principles of government—one of the most difficult subjects to impart to the foreign-born, she said. In addition, they are instructed in the operation of government.

They are also taught that to sustain a democracy, they must have education, so as to be able both to understand and apply the principles of government, said Miss Aiton.

"No one need think that those coming to the school want a communist, totalitarian or socialist government," said Miss Aiton. "They want a democracy."

The school has succeeded in breaking down the emitties among the people of different countries who are its students. Whole families attend, she said, and old and young of all nationalities sit side by side, all trying to learn the same thing.

The institution is part of the public school system, but more money is needed for citizenship teachers, said Miss Aiton. Three classes are conducted, some with as many as 70 students. A nursery school is maintained for the children whose mothers are enrolled. One of the students is an Italian woman who had been here 18 years and has only begun to learn English.

German Duke Arrives With Party; Will Meet Norman Davis Today

Carl Eduard, of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Is President of Reich's Red Cross; Full Schedule on Calendar for Brief Visit

By Hope Ridings Miller

In town for a brief visit, H. R. H. Carl Eduard, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, faces a full schedule that will officially begin this morning when he meets Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, at 11 o'clock. The duke is vice chairman of the League of Red Cross Societies and president of the German Red Cross.

HOPPER MILLER

Arriving in Washington yesterday morning from Chicago, the Duke and his entourage were met at Union Station by the German Charge d'Affaires, Dr. Hans Thomsen, and Ernest Swift, vice chairman of the Red Cross. In the duke's party were Consul General Heinrich Stahmer, member of the staff of the German Minister of Foreign Affairs; Dr. Wilhelm Tannenber, first secretary of the German Embassy, who has been assigned to the duke's staff for the duration of his trip in the United States, and his private secretary, Herr Fritz von Grolman. The visitors are staying at the Mayflower.

The German Charge d'Affaires will entertain at dinner in honor of the visitor this evening. Guests will include several members of the State Department, the Diplomatic Corps, the American Red Cross and other governmental departments.

To Be Feted at Luncheon Tomorrow

The duke will visit Mount Vernon tomorrow morning and will be feted at a luncheon given by Norman Davis at his home. Guests will include the German Charge d'Affaires and Frau Hans Thomsen, former United States Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. Hugh Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, James Clement Dunn, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. Mary Beard and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift.

The German Charge d'Affaires and Frau Thomsen will entertain at a large reception in honor of the duke tomorrow afternoon, the party taking place at the Shoreham Hotel from 5 to 7 p. m. Later, a number of friends will attend a buffet supper at the Thomsen home on Colorado avenue.

The Minister of Sweden, Wollmar Bostrom, will entertain at a luncheon in honor of the duke on Sunday, and that afternoon there will be a ceremony to celebrate German War Memorial Day. At that time the duke will greet a number of German residents of the Capital.

Monday morning, the duke and his party will leave by train for New York and will go from there to Detroit, Indianapolis, and Los Angeles. From the latter city he will go to San Francisco and will sail from there April 13.

Is Grandson of Queen Victoria

The 55-year-old duke is the only son of the late Duke of Albany, who was the fourth son of Queen Victoria. Educated at Eton and at the military college at Lichterfelde near Berlin, he also studied at Bonn University, later, Oxford University conferring upon him an honorary degree. In 1900 he succeeded his uncle, Duke Alfred, to the dukedom of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

In the revolution of 1918, his royal highness lost the dukedom and subsequently identified himself with the young Nationalist movement. His relations with Adolf Hitler date from 1922. In recognition of his merit he was appointed high commissioner and president of the German Red Cross by Field Marshal von Hindenburg, and was later named by Hitler to a number of important posts. He has been a member of the Reichstag since 1936.

The duke's wife is the former Princess Viktoria Adelheid of Schleswig Holstein. Married in 1905, they have three sons and two daughters, one of the latter being Princess Sybille, wife of the heir presumptive to the throne of Sweden.

Widow of Former Congressman Is Writing Book on History of Feuds Here Over Rank

A HISTORY of the feuds, heart-burnings and comic relief attendant on that vital Capital issue, rank, is being written by the widow of a former member of Congress. Mrs. James H. MacLafferty is here from her home on the West Coast to dig around in the Library of Congress in search of anecdotes and human-interest stuff on the question of who outranks whom at Washington functions, and why. The first great split over official etiquette occurred when John Quincy Adams was Secretary of State and Washington was a muddy village. The cause of the fight was whether Senators' wives should call on the ladies of Cabinet members, or vice versa. In the row the angry Senators complained that since they had created the Cabinet, they should be deferred to. Over the claret the battle waged for weeks, everybody taking sides until finally a Cabinet meeting had to be called to settle the issue. The insistent solons finally won out.

ANOTHER TERRIFIC BATTLE took place in the Speakerhood of "Uncle Joe" Cannon. He had a daughter who he thought should rank as his wife, which caused a fight similar to the famous Gann-Longworth episode of more recent times. Finally, to end the controversy, President Theodore Roosevelt gave a special dinner at the White House in honor of the Speaker, and started what became an annual custom.

To gather her facts—and it's difficult to find material—Mrs. MacLafferty pores over yellowed newspapers and old etiquette books in the Library of Congress. The other day, at the final meeting of Mrs. Hugh Rutler's class in public speaking for Congressional wives, she told of some of her experiences in this research. Among the other speakers was a Representative's wife who recounted how with $500 she had won in a soap-naming contest she and her husband launched his political career.

WE SAW SOMETHING new and amusing in evening pocket-books at dinner the other night. Both Mme. Cunningham, stunning blonde wife of the Dutch envoy, and Mrs. Robert Pell were carrying four or five little bags tied together on a chain. One was for powder and the others for lipstick, key and handkerchief. Mme. Loudon's were made of gold and Mrs. Pell's were of gold.

EVEN WITH THE STAFF of the British Embassy increased from about 40 to over 100 since the war, lights still burn late in the rather forbidding red-brick chancery on Massachusetts avenue. Nine attaches alone do nothing but cipher telegrams all day long, including Sundays.

LAURITZ MELCHIOR, the Wagnerian tenor, will celebrate his fiftieth birthday on March 20 and has taken over an entire Scandinavian restaurant in New York for the evening. Among those invited from Washington are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims. Like the singer, Mrs. Sims was born in Denmark.

PRACTICALLY AS MANY PEOPLE throughout the country will soon have heard or seen Elsa Maxwell as can brag of having shaken the hand of Mrs. Roosevelt. The famous hostess is now making a series of records on "How to Give a Party" which will be distributed all over the country.

CANFIELD HIMES, devoted brother of debutant Marilyn, will give a dinner for her tonight at the 1925 F Street Club in celebration of her eighteenth birthday. Marilyn will leave for Florida next week to join her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes. Her younger sister, Katrina, who gets her debut vacation then, will accompany her.

Edwin Watsons Soon to Inspect New Home

General and Wife Plan Charlottesville Trip To View Construction

Gen. and Mrs. Edwin Watson will be off to Charlottesville, Va., for a short jaunt soon to view their new home which is fast nearing completion.

The military aide to President Roosevelt has not had a chance to see the progress made in building since he returned from the Southern cruise with his chief. A simple white brick house, it is situated near Monticello, Jefferson's home. Gen. Watson, who is a Virginian, hopes to make his permanent home there when he retires.

Already Gen. Watson is puzzling over where to put the President when he visits him, as the house boasts of only two bedrooms. But he cheerfully dismisses the subject with "Well, we can always put up Army cots."

There is sure to be a good piano in tune at the new Watson home for Frances Nash, as Mrs. Watson is known professionally, would hardly be without one. On April 2 Mrs. Watson will appear as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra here.

Taft Family To Gather Here

Taft clan in Washington this week-end. Horace Taft has arrived from the Taft School to spend his spring vacation, and Lloyd Taft will arrive today from the same school. He stopped over in New York to visit briefly before coming on to Washington.

William Howard Taft, 24, oldest son of Senator and Mrs. Taft will come to Washington today from Princeton and will be here over the week-end. He will receive his Ph. D. in June and is planning to teach next winter.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Taft observed her regular Thursday "at home," and received informally from 4 to 6 p. m.

Mrs. Taft's schedule will be crowded from now on through the spring. On April 1 she will be guest of honor at a small luncheon to be given by Miss Maxine Davis. Later in April she will go to Boston and other points in New England on a speaking tour.

Robertsons Give Dinner to Honor The Petersons

Guests included the Adjutant General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams, and Mrs. Adams; the Assistant Chief of Engineers, Brig. Gen. Thomas M. Robins, and Mrs. Robins; Brig. Gen. Charles F. Thompson and Mrs. Thompson, Col. and Mrs. Edgar B. Colladay, Col. and Mrs. William Rose, Col. and Mrs. T. J. Camp, and Col. and Mrs. Gerkeley T. Merchant.

Gen. Peterson, who has just been appointed Inspector General to succeed Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed, who retired, came to Washington from Chicago, where he had been chief of staff of the Sixth Corps Area.

Ottawa Consul To Visit Here

The Counselor of the United States Legation at Ottawa and Mrs. John Farr Simmons will arrive here Easter to stay with Mrs. Simmons' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson. The two Simmons youngsters will remain in Canada.

Tentative plans are being made by the Thompsons, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, for a trip to Mexico. The former Miss Caroline Huston Thompson and her husband, who serves as consul at Ottawa as well as counselor of the legation, will motor down here.

Ann Kiess to Sing At Stork Club

Miss Ann Kiess, Washington former debutante, will open a singing engagement Tuesday at the Stork Club in New York. The daughter of Mrs. Edgar Kiess, of Washington, she has been modeling in smart fashion shows in New York.

Miss Kiess will celebrate her birthday Sunday with a party to be given at the Stork Club by her mother.

Mrs. Ray M. North Fetes Mrs. Fellers

Mrs. Ray M. North, wife of the Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, entertained at a surprise birthday party yesterday in honor of Mrs. Robert E. Fellers. Assisting Mrs. North was Mrs. Jeff M. Donelson, Mrs. Vincent Burke, Mrs. Oscar Latimer, Mrs. Charles Wenrich and Mrs. Robert King.

Other guests attending were Mrs. Joe W. Rustin, Mrs. J. P. Burke, Mrs. Bedford Robertson, Mrs. Lavergne Fairchild and Mrs. Lillie Garrett.

Polish Diplomat Returns to Capital

The Ambassador of Poland, Count Jerzy Potocki, returned yesterday after a trip to New York.

The Counselor of the Embassy, John Drohojowski, will leave on Sunday for Chicago, where he will join Gen. Josef Haller, the Polish statesman who has been making a goodwill tour of this country. The party will visit New England and New York before Gen. Haller sails for France the end of April.

Miss Mary House Is Party Hostess

Miss Mary Senate Howes was hostess at a reception yesterday at the Mayflower entertaining in compliment to Mrs. Robert D. Heintz, wife of Lieut. Heintz, U. S. M. C., who is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Wright, and is returning tomorrow to Parris Island.

Miss Catherine Findlay, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., a former classmate of Miss Howes at National Park Seminary, was among the out-of-town guests. The function was held in the North Room of the hotel. Spring flowers were used on the table. Miss Howes wore a frock of black crepe with a necklace of coral.

200 Entertained As Mrs. Cajigas Resumes Parties

Resuming her series of "at home" Mrs. Thomas Cajigas entertained around 200 guests yesterday afternoon. Later in the evening Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas gathered in a small group for an informal buffet supper. Guests included members of the Mexican and Chilean Embassy staffs. Honored at the affair were Col. and Mrs. Joseph Fagan who have recently returned from China.

Mrs. Fagan arrived earlier in the afternoon and stayed on through the supper, being joined later by her husband. Red and white carnations were used in profusion throughout the house. Four large Easter lily plants completed the picture. Mrs. Cajigas received wearing a white lace gown trimmed in rhinestones. Assisting during the afternoon was her daughter, Miss Anita Cajigas, who wore a black crepe frock.

Also assisting Mrs. Cajigas were Mrs. Lucy Smith, Mrs. Brison Norris, Mrs. Irving Brothman, Mrs. John Hess, Mrs. Helen Carr, Mrs. E. F. Koss, Mrs. Mettiah King and Mrs. Louise Hartley Fairman.

Taking turns at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Fernandez, wife of the Minister of Paraguay, Mme. Pani D'Alby, Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, Mme. Mrs. Finkstaedt Is Due Back Today

Arriving today from Boca Grande, Fla., will be Mrs. Edward Finkstaedt, who journeyed South the last of February. Accompanying her will be Mrs. Francis Finkstaedt, her mother-in-law, who will stay in Washington for a brief time before going home to Michigan. Although Washingtonians are still beating a path South, many are returning with heavy coats of tan. Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, who have also been enjoying Boca Grande, will return on Sunday from there.

Mrs. Cabot Coville Receives Latest Word of Zamboanga

Archbold-Fairchild Expedition
Cables of Palms Found in South Seas;
Quezon Feted Explorers on Yacht

By Elizabeth Henney

FROM A TINY ISLAND in the Pacific Ocean comes a cable with the latest news of that glamorous and scientific Archbold-Fairchild botanical expedition, which set sail in a Chinese junk to explore the South Sea Islands.

Mrs. Fairchild's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor are at the moment vacationing at their estate in Coral Gables, Fla., but the news is still coming to Washington via Mrs. Cabot Coville, daughter of the Grosvenors and niece of Dr. and Mrs. David Fairchild. She and Mr. Coville, who have just returned from Japan, are staying at the Grosvenor estate, Wild Acres, in Bethesda. Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor, whose home in Florida is next to the Fairchild's estate and tropical gardens, will return to Washington on April 13, in time for Dr. Grosvenor to attend the Gridiron dinner here.

But back to the expedition: For many weeks the Chinese junk, which though lumbering looking outside is fitted with the latest improvements and conveniences inside, has been sailing the world's largest ocean. And for weeks the members of the expedition have been cut off from communication with the rest of the world. The last news came from Zamboanga, on the island of Mindanao in the Philippines.

Many of the friends of Mrs. Anne Archbold and Dr. and Mrs. Fairchild have wondered just why they picked a Chinese junk to go a-sailing in, and the true reason has just come to light. The principal reason of the trip was to make as varied a collection as possible of the infinite varieties of tropical palms. To do this it was necessary to explore as many tiny and unknown islands as could be reached. So, since a Chinese junk requires less draft than the tiniest of yachts, and would sail happily into almost any tropical lagoon, it was the obvious choice.

The results have been remarkable and the expedition has collected many specimens of palms never seen in the United States. Incidentally, they have also collected a lot of interesting experiences, stopping off here and there on unmapped islands inhabited only by a few natives (and interesting palms).

The lack of English language among those natives didn't hamper the expedition at all, for with wise forethought, included among the members of the group is Dan Hubrecht, who has lived many years in Java and knows most of the native dialects. Mr. Hubrecht, by the way, is the son of the former Minister from The Netherlands to the United States and is well-known in Washington.

By cable comes the news that the expedition will reach Surabaya, Java, on March 17 and will remain there until March 24 before plunging into unknown uncharted seas again.

A royal send-off (or rather presidential) was that given the expedition when it left Manila on January 7, for the members of the party were guests of Manuel Quezon, of the Philippines, on his presidential yacht. It is probable that the president yearned to go along on that romantic voyage (who wouldn't?), but felt the call of duty just a bit too strongly. Anyway, he sailed them through the China Sea for three days in his yacht before parting with them reluctantly at a tiny island, where they rejoined their junk to go exploring, while he returned to presidential duties in Manila.

Though no plans have been made for terminating the expedition, it will be long after the voyage is over before the Grosvenors return to the United States. For when exploration is finished they will sail for Cairo, Egypt, to pay an extended visit to their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Marston Bates. Dr. Bates, who is with the Rockefeller Foundation there, is specializing in the study of malarial mosquitoes, and malarial control.

Adm. Downes Leaves Today

The president of the Medical Examining Board of the Navy, Rear Admiral John Downes, and Mrs. Downes will leave Washington today to spend the week-end at Hampton Roads, Va., as guest of Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig and Mrs. Taussig. Admiral Taussig is commandant of the Naval Base there.

On March 29, Admiral and Mrs. Downes will entertain at dinner at their home, 2023 Connecticut avenue, in honor of the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark, and Mrs. Stark.

J. P. B. Barbers Entertain on 40th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. B. Barber celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary last night at a large reception at their home in Chevy Chase to which 150 guests were invited.

Mrs. Barber received, wearing a flesh pink silk lace gown over taffeta with cluster of shaded pink roses. She wore a long-sleeved jacket over the gown. Assisting the hosts was their daughter, Miss Wills Luce Barber, who wore a trailing black chiffon frock printed with pastel flowers. Also assisting were Mrs. Arthur Carnduff and Mrs. James Costello.

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—Things I never even suspected about fighting cocks:

George Washington, Andrew Jackson and Abraham Lincoln were not above breeding and sending their own fighting chickens into the pits. The lineage of the gamecocks is not to be sniffed at. On the walls of the buried cities of Mesopotamia the fighting chicken is depicted by ancient artists. In the United States today, a dozen well-edited gamecock magazine are the journals of the trade.

Here in Orlando, we are pretty close to the chicken-fighting capital of America. For 22 years the international gamecock tournament has been held in Orlando's famous pit. Chicken fighting is legal in Florida. At least it is not illegal. A Governor who fights cocks could hardly frown on it.

They're no pikers, these folks who breed and train their roosters for the fighting pit. Last year when the tournament breeders checked into Orlando's No. 1 hotel, they brought cash estimated at $250,000. That was their betting roll. As much as $2,500 changed hands on one cockfight.

These men who call themselves cockers bet the old-fashioned way. There are no bookmakers, nor mutual machines. "Five hundred on the red," they say, and they don't mean roulette. Their betting five C-notes on the red chicken to lick the other cock, and the only assurance they have that their bet is down is a nod of the head from the other side of the pit. They have one betting rule: The loser must walk across the pit and pay off the winner at the end of every fight.

The odds are never big. Eight to five is a huge set of odds. Why? Because these fighting cocks are always well matched. And they must weigh within an ounce of each other. They never fight out of their class. Oh, yes, cockfighting has its "smart money," too. There are professional cockfighting characters who follow the tournaments and know the bloodlines for as many as 35 years back, and they represent the supposed wise money.

One thing about a beaten rooster, he rarely gets a return bout. The reason is simple enough. When he loses, he is usually a dead chicken. That's if he is a game chicken he is a dead one, because gamecocks battle unto death. They don't run. It's simply their nature to fight to their last ounce of strength.

Do they like to fight? Apparently they do. Mr. C. C. Clifford, secretary of the Orlando Game Club, vows that even if you starve a rooster for two days, then set a pan of corn in front of him, then lead another rooster into a shed, the starved rooster will ignore the corn. That is, until he has got in a few licks at the intruder and lives through the embroglio.

That's one of the methods of training roosters—starving 'em. Actually they go on a 14-day diet before a big tournament. They get the whites of eggs and a special specie of sprouts from oats, and that is all. Because a lean and hungry rooster is the best fighter. In much the same manner that a prize fighter is brought on edge for an important bout, a gamecock is trained for an important pitting.

They train 'em by pushing 'em backwards on a long board, to stir their fighting qualities and they toss the chickens high in the air to develop their wind. A conditioned rooster's leg muscles are hard as steel. And he is supposed to fight at top speed for 30 minutes, unless of course, he is rendered hors de combat sooner. There have been fights that have lasted only 5 seconds. Two cocks have been released by their handlers on the signal of a referee and, meeting in mid-air, have plunged their spurs into each other's hearts for a double killing.

Down in Cuba they fight the cocks with native spurs, or what they call the naked heel which the Cuban cockers sandpaper to a fine needle point. But native spurs don't suit American cockers. Appended to the roosters' heels are steel spurs ranging from an inch to 2 1/2 inches in length. Try getting yourself spurred by one of those things sometime.

There are fighting cocks and fighting cocks, exactly as there are all kinds of fighting men. A smart gamecock will wait and sidestep a rushing foe until he has the latter off balance and then wham him with a well-directed kick to the heart, spur foremost. But the rough-and-tumble gamecocks do very well, too, a la Galento. It's a remarkable gamecock, incidentally, that survives as many as five fights.

The prize ring is guilty of plagiarism from the fighting cocks on a whole-sale scale. Biting is a term first applied to gamecocks, and so-called because cocks get their early training not with death-dealing spurs but with little pillows attached to their heels. Long before fighters ever thought of shaking hands before a bout, gamecock men took their chickens into midring where they rubbed bills as a preliminary ceremony. That "Hello, I ain't hostile" microphone gag of the fight winner is a dead steal, too, from the cockfights. You ought to hear a winning chicken crow, without benefit of microphone, after he gets the duke.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—When they recently threatened to toss the furniture of Burt L. Standish, the creator of Frank Merriwell, out on a New York curb, one of the young men who wrote sob pieces about the tribulations of mass-production literary men mentioned, "with a well-bred sneer," that one of the Merriwell's most ludicrously impossible achievements was his "double shoot" curve ball.

The young man hinted that this pitch, which veered one way and then the other, was a physical impossibility.

Yeah? Well, we talked to a double-shooter today and while he couldn't give us a very clear picture of how he does it, the fact remains that he does have the genius for doing it. His name is Dutch Leonard. Last year with a sixth-place Washington team he won 20 games and lost only eight. There were only three other 20-game or more winners in the American League; Bobby Feller, Red Ruffing and Buck Newsom.

Leonard whipped the New York Yankees four times in a row, and his club gave him only two runs in his next three starts against the great champions. He beat Red Ruffing, 2-1, in a 12-inning game, beat him again, 3-1, on Gehrig Day and distinguished himself in many other ways.

His "double shoot" has been called a knuckle ball, but it really isn't. He digs the tips of his right index and middle fingers into the baseball, lets the ball fly away from him with the same motion that he uses on his modest fast ball, and just as it slips off his nails he flicks out his fingers, like a man flicking the water off wet hands.

The ball doesn't spin in the air. It begins to veer off its pre-ordained course about 12 feet from the batter. Sometimes it shoots off on a tangent to the left, sometimes to the right. Sometimes it drops, as if the forces of gravity suddenly were increased a thousand fold. Rick Ferrell, his catcher, swears that sometimes it rises—even though it is a slowish kind of pitch. Clark Griffith, who has seen them all since Abner Doubleday's time, says that there never was anything like it in baseball.

Leonard has remarkable control. He walked only 59 men last year. In his 13-inning, 1-0, triumph over Bobby Feller the year before he gave no walks, though he was throwing that eerie pitch nearly every toss. Sometimes he throws it only a dozen times a game, particularly when the rival coaches began to yell to their batters that the so-called knuckler is coming.

With that "knuckler," which really is more of a finger-pad or finger-nail ball, Leonard won 14 games for Brooklyn in 1934. He won 13 games after joining Atlanta in July, and though sick through most of 1937 won 15 that year.

Griffith got him in the draft for $6,500, which makes him one of the greatest bargains that Griff—a bargain-getter of the old school—ever found.

There is no pitch like Leonard's in baseball and the creator of it cannot figure it out himself. All he knows is that he hit upon a kind of friendly Frankenstein that has arisen to do his bidding. With the financial returns from the screw pitch he has built himself a little bowling alley business and is laying money aside against the birth of an expected heir this summer.

He is a little amazed by it all—but not as much as the DIMAGGIOs, FOXES, GREENBERGS, et al who have been breaking their bats and backs trying to figure out the vagaries of a storybook pitch which only Merriwell is supposed to have mastered.

Keeneland Track Changes Hands

Lexington, Ky., March 14.—The Keeneland Association gave up active operation of its nonprofit horse racing track here today, leasing the oval to a new organization, Keeneland Race Course, Inc., for a three-year period.

Leasing of the track was part of a program approved by association members under which net proceeds from the rental are to be turned over to educational and charitable institutions. Rental terms were not made known.

L. L. Haggin, 2d, Lexington horseman and president of the newly formed Keeneland Race Course, Inc., announced an increase of $14,000 in purses for this year's spring racing meeting over the 1939 spring meeting.

Woodruff Sets All-Time Half-Mile Record

Eight Marks Broken at Dartmouth

N. Y. U. Relay Team Better Mile Time; Negro's Effort Tops For Indoor, Outdoor

Hanover, N. H., March 14.—In the greatest record-breaking carnival in indoor track and field history, eight new indoor world marks were established tonight during the third annual invitation Dartmouth games.

One of the new figures, Long John Woodruff's 1:47.7 for the half-mile proved the fastest time ever registered indoors or outdoors for that distance.

New York University's 1-mile relay team, concluded a night of record making over Dartmouth's oversized board track by covering the distance in 3 minutes 15 seconds flat. This established two new board marks, bettering Fordham's 3:15.2 for the mile and also for the 1,600 meters established last year.

In addition to the New York U. mile relay and 1,600-meter records, and the new half-mile mark established by Woodruff, former Pittsburgh U. Negro runner, these five records also were hung up.

In running the half-mile, Woodruff's time for the 800 meters was 1:47.7, a new indoor mark. Jim Herbert, New York U. Negro, opened the competition with new figures of 48.4 for the quarter-mile and 47.9 for 400 meters. This was the first time a runner had been timed for the 400 meters indoors.

New York University's half-mile relay team registered a new figure of 1:27.7 for that event.

Runners Are Paced

A capacity crowd of 1,500 fans witnessed tonight's historic competition. In all the events excepting the mile relay the runners were paced by Dartmouth players. In the mile relay, New York U.'s quartet of speedsters were pushed throughout by a veteran four from the Boston Athletic Association. At the third exchange of batons in this relay, Douglas Raymond, of Boston, was actually ahead of Harold Borow, of N. Y. U.

Woodruff, whose 1:47.7 for the half-mile bettered Elroy Robinson's 3-year-old outdoor mark of 1:48.6 for that distance, said in his dressing room, "Running conditions were perfect. I never ran in a meet before where not a single person in the crowd smoked. That helped a great deal."

Incidentally, although Woodruff has been one of America's outstanding track stars for the past six years, his great performance tonight gave him his first records.

Gardner Mulloy Upsets McNeill In Bermuda Play

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 14 (INS).—Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, Fla., today registered a major upset when he dethroned Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, seeded No. 1, by a score of 8-4, 3-6, 8-6 in the men's singles semifinals of the twenty-seventh annual Bermuda amateur tennis championships.

In the other men's semifinal, Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., eliminated Henry Prussoff, of Seattle, Wash., 6-1, 6-1. Cooke will clash with Mulloy in the final Saturday.

Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, beat Helene Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 6-0, 6-3, and Mrs. Sarah Fairley Fabian, of Boston, defeated Gracy Wheeler, of Los Angeles, 7-5, 6-0, in the women's semifinals.

Good News Lives Up to Name in Record-Setting Race

U. S. Plans Taking Part in Olympic Games

Will Participate If Games Are Held In Helsinki This Year

By the United Press
New York, March 14.—The United States will participate in the Olympic games if they are held this year in Helsinki, Finland, the United Press learned today.

Olympic officials have been going ahead with plans to participate in the games, despite the fact that because of the war most of the world felt Finland would give up the games.

"We are ready to move ahead at full speed if we receive word that the games will be held," an official said.

Permission to send a team abroad must be obtained from the State Department. That was not expected to be difficult because the route under consideration would not take the athletes through the war zone.

Proposed Route Outlined

The American committee received a letter today from Werner Klingenberg, of Germany, secretary of the international Olympic committee, outlining a proposed route.

The athletes would travel on an American vessel to Narvik, a port in northern Norway outside the belligerent zone. Thence the team would travel by rail to Helsinki, a 30-hour trip.

Klingenberg suggested the United States get together with South American countries and take their athletes along from New York in the event the games are held.

Harris to Use Rookie Trio Against Indians

Bucky Jacobs, Early Wynn and Torres To Pitch Against Cleveland Today; Case To Play Centerfield in Fort Myers Game

By Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—The grim business of baseball will begin tomorrow for three of the rookie pitching crop in the Nats' camp. They are Bucky Jacobs, Early Wynn and Gilberto Torres, the trio of young right handers Bucky Harris will send against the Cleveland Indians at Fort Myers.

'Y' Extends Delhuds, but Bows, 37-36

A foul shot, on which the ball bounced on the edge of the rim before dropping through for the precious one point, was the margin of victory for the seeded Delaware and Hudson team last night.

The underdog Y. M. C. A. five went down swinging in every sense of the word, going out of the District A. A. U. championship tournament after holding the Delhuds to a 37-36 score.

The Treasury Department girls, boasting four players who won championships under the banner of Rockville, outlasted the Veterans Administration to win in their debut, 38-9. In the 145-pound class, Ida's Department Store came through with a 24-20 victory over Mullen's Cafe.

Roosevelt, Bethesda Face Tough Opponents In Duke Cage Tourney

By Bill Burnett

A Staff Correspondent

Durham, N. C., March 14.—Their hopes undampened by a day-long rain which followed their trip southward, Washington's two entries in the Duke-Durham scholastic basketball tournament arrived here early last night and prepared to make their first appearances in the second annual event a memorable one.

Roosevelt, which came in via bus, put in an appearance almost an hour late due to the downpour and immediately began inquiries about the strength of Harrodsburg High, of Kentucky, with which it will open hostilities tomorrow morning at 8:30.

Bethesda fared slightly better in private autos on the trip down. The club which received a bid an alternate following the withdrawal of Runnelstown, Miss., only Wednesday, was in high spirits and anxious for its meeting with Lanier High, of Macon, Ga., at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

New to Tourney Play

Every player on the two teams is seeing his first action in out-of-town tournament play. Winners of the Intighigh and Metropolitan championships this year for the first time in 21 years, the Rough Riders were naturally new to the game. Bethesda's last outing was in 1938, when the greatest team in its history romped to the finals of the Washington and Lee University event in Lexington, Va. None of the members of the '40 squad are with that delegation.

Immediately upon their arrival both teams were ushered to Duke's dining hall, where the eight teams in the tourney were tendered a banquet by the junior chamber of commerce.

High light of the meal was the speech of Coach Wallace Wade, head football coach at Duke. Players were introduced individually.

May Purchase Yanks

St. Augustine, Fla., March 14.—The team of Clyde Usina, Jr., and Walter Burkema provided the chief fireworks in the opening round today of the national amateur-professional match play best ball championship over the St. Augustine links.

Usina, a St. Augustine youth who is now professional at West Palm Beach, and his amateur partner from Evanston, Ill., eliminated the highly favored combination of Henry Picard, current P. G. A. champion, and Frank Ford, Charleston, S. C. 1 up. Picard and Ford won the event in 1937.

Other favored teams also fell by the wayside. Jimmy Hines, Great Neck, Long Island, and Jimmy Ferrier, Australian National Open and amateur champion, were upset, 1 up, by the practically unknown combine of Lloyd Sparrow and Dick van Kleeck, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., and Charles Whitehead, Plainfield, N. J., another highly regarded pair, were ousted by Herman Keiser, Springfield, Mo., and Dick Doeschler, Ponie Vedra Beach, Fla., in 21 holes.

GOV. MURPHY, Potential Purchaser

Sale Forced To Raise Tax Money

Gov. Murphy Heads Syndicate Seeking New York Baseball Empire, Report Says

By the Associated Press

New York, March 14.—The baseball empire of the New York Yankees, estimated at worth $6,000,000 to $10,000,000, and frequently reported for sale since the death of Col. Jacob Ruppert a year ago, may be transferred to a syndicate headed by Gov. Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire before the season opens next month.

Murphy, located in Boston tonight, confirmed the fact that he has been negotiating for control of the club and would have a personal interest in it.

The United Press said that the team will be sold in order to raise cash to meet inheritance taxes on the $50,000,000 estate of the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, who loved the Yankees so much he spent a fortune building them to their present peak.

It was reported in New York today that a syndicate headed by Gov. Murphy already had closed a deal to purchase the club.

Federal and State inheritance taxes on the Ruppert estate will be so high—nobody knows how much they will be—that it was learned the only way to raise money to pay them would be to sell the Yankees.

The executors decided some time ago against selling any part of the 73-year-old brewery interests of the Ruppert family. Col. Ruppert owned 30 per cent of the Ruppert brewery—Editor's note.

Several details must be ironed out before the transaction is completed. Murphy said, but in New York it was believed virtually every phase of the sale had been developed except obtaining approval of the other clubs in the American League.

Murphy May Retire

There was no reason to expect that this would be withheld.

All officials of the Yankees were in Florida and the only one who could be reached for comment was President Edward G. Barrow, who denied that any new negotiations were under way, but admitted:

"All that is handled by Byron Clark," for many years personal attorney for Col. Ruppert and one of the directors of the ball club. Clark also was in Florida.

Gov. Murphy, a prominent shoe manufacturer in Manchester, N. H., has been an ardent baseball fan for many years. He was defeated this week in an election of delegates to the Republican national convention and some of his friends expect that he will retire from politics if this deal is completed.

Kennedy Mentioned

Murphy at one time was a stockholder of the Boston National League Club, then known as the Braves, and his name was linked with it as a possible purchaser when it got into financial difficulties.

He is a close friend of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and both their names have been mentioned in recent months in connection with a sale of the Yanks.

The New York Sun also discovered today that James J. Walker, former mayor of New York and father of the Sunday baseball law in this State, had been approached by three different persons asking him to head a group buy the club. Arrangements still "are on the fire," he told the paper, but added that he would consider the proposition only if Barrow was permitted to remain as president, or executive head, of the baseball system, which includes Newark, Kansas City and many other minor league teams.

Ruppert Left Club

Rumors of a deal for the baseball properties have been current for months since the death of Col. Jacob Ruppert on January 13, 1939. He left a fortune at that time estimated at more than $40,000,000 in brewery, real estate and baseball holdings.

The bulk of this estate passed to two nieces, Mrs. Joseph Holleran, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. S. J. Basil Maguire, also of Greenwich, and a friend, Helen Withnips Weyant, former actress.

Although the estate was left to the three women, actual control of the baseball club was placed in the hands of four trustees, headed by Edward G. Barrow, who was elected president of the club.

Other trustees named were Col. Ruppert's brother, George, his brother-in-law, H. Harrison Sillock Jr., of Greenwich, Conn., and Frederick J. Grant, for many years the attorney for Col. Ruppert and the Ruppert interests.

Cubs Pound Sox Rookie To Win, 14-7

Homers Help Indians Open With Victory Over Syracuse Chiefs. Dick Lanahan Loses

By the Associated Press
St. Petersburg, Fla., March 14.—The New York Yankees rang up their fourth straight Grapefruit League victory—and their sixth straight over the Cincinnati Reds, including four in last fall's World Series—today by a 5-3 margin.

The Reds' two aces, Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer, combined efforts, but to no avail, as a couple of Yank youngsters, Marius Russo and Marvin Breuer, outshone their older mound foes.

Babe Dahlgren was the Yanks' batting ace, getting a single off Walters in the big fourth when the champions scored their first run, and belting Jim Turner for a homer in the eighth.

Cubs Rout White Sox

Los Angeles, Calif., March 14.—Manager Jimmy Dyke's scheme to embarrass the Chicago Cubs with rookie pitching backfired today as the Cubs routed the Chicago White Sox, 14 to 7, in the inaugural exhibition game for each club.

All but one of the Cub runs came in the first two innings as the National Leaguers coupled ten hits, including Catcher Al Todd's home run, with eight bases on balls and three wild pitches.

Most of the damage was accomplished by Earl Grove, who pitched to nine men in the second inning.

Indians, Homers Help

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 13.—The Cleveland Indians inaugurated their Grapefruit League campaign today by connecting for two home runs to scalp the Syracuse Chiefs, 6 to 1.

Clarence Campbell, rookie outfielder, blasted a three-run circuit out over rightfield wall in the sixth inning to give the Tribe a convincing 6-0 lead. He also doubled in the third to start Cleveland off in its second year.

Second baseman Ray Mack opened the scoring in the second with a 300-foot homer over left-center fence. The paths were empty.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 14.—The Phillies came from behind today to beat Rochester of the International League, 7 to 4, for their second straight exhibition victory.

Rochester pounded Hugh Mulcahy for seven hits and 4 runs in the first three innings, but the Phils tied the score in the fourth on a 4-run outburst featured by Charley Leitch's homer with one on.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies making jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

SIDNEY HUDSON, Pitcher.

A distraught manager of the Sanford club of the Florida State League waved his fourth pitcher to the showers on a day in September, 1938, and then discovered he had acted hastily. He didn't have a pitcher left. He scanned the remainder of his lineup for somebody who might get the ball over the plate and his glance rested finally on First Baseman Sid Hudson. To that point, Hudson had played third base, the outfield and first base at various times for Sanford. On the theory that Hudson at least was versatile, the manager sent him into the box.

Thus was born a big league pitching career—Bucky Harris hopes. Hudson, now in the Nats' camp, is the current rage of the Washington rookie pitching crop with the Nats' bosses far out on a limb in their emphatic predictions that "he can't miss."

There is evidence to support that belief. The 22-year-old 6-foot-4-inch right-hander is showing Harris a stylish delivery that has the Nats' boss enraptured. He likes Hudson's fast ball and he likes his control. And above all he likes his pitching motion wherein the tall rookie throws a curve ball, a fast ball and a seemingly clever change of pace with the same delivery.

All the hub-bub in the Nats' camp over Hudson has quite taken the boy back. Two years ago he was a mere Georgia country lad living near the Tennessee line and doing very well for the Rossville, Ga. high school team. But he's wearing his new recognition becomingly enough. He's on the serious side with no flair whatever for strutting.

The Nats thought well enough of him to pay $7,500 for him despite the fact that his only pitching experience was in the Class D Florida League. But he towered over the pitchers in that league like some certified big leaguer, starting 29 games, completing 27, winning 24 and losing only four. He had an earned run average of 1.59 per game. Two of the games he lost were extra-inning affairs.

He has pitching poise, he fields his position masterfully, and the Florida natives vow that anytime he wants to give up pitching he can fashion a big league job for himself either at first base or in the outfield.

Did Someone Say Season for Ducks Is Over?

From the looks of things here, you'd better duck—and quick. This is what happens when Eastern High School's baseball team was forced indoors for practice yesterday. The sharpshooters are prospective Pitchers Warren Earhart, Teddy Walsh and Vernon Haslip, left to right.

FBI Battles Greenbelt in Post Tourney

Sherwood, Mt. Rainier Girls on Program at Heurich Gym Tonight

Federal Bureau of Investigation's crack unlimited team makes its debut in the District A. A. U. championship tournament tonight. The FBI team, with a star-studded line-up, meets the Greenbelt A. C. five, representing Maryland's up-and-coming community. The battle, expected to provide the feature action on a three-game program, starts at 9:30 p. m. As usual, the Heurich gymnasium will be the scene.

The G-men, prominent for years in the tournaments sponsored annually by The Washington Post, will have their hands full with Greenbelt. The Maryland boys, with Mickey McDonald in the chief scoring role, showed plenty of fight when they eliminated Treasury in the first round.

FBI has shown ability in league competition this year, packs scoring power and has a veteran line-up which includes the Thompson brothers, former Western High School stars.

The second of the series of girls' games is scheduled to open the program. Sherwood, long prominent among local sextets, will take on the youthful Mount Rainier team which made a hit in last year's tournament. This game begins at 7:30.

An unlimited class battle holds the attention, starting at 8:30 o'clock. The Washington Boys Club, Central Branch, tackles the CCC Camp 2349, from Quantico, Va. The Boys Club turned on the heat to defeat the Georgetown five in its first appearance. Little is known of the CCC boys, but they say they will be in there battling.

Two unlimited and one 145-pound games are scheduled for tomorrow night. The usual 25-cent admission fee is charged to each program.

Zeke Bonura Leaves To Talk Salary Terms

New Orleans, March 14 (AP).—Before leaving for Florida tonight in an effort to reach a salary agreement, Zeke Bonura, holdout first baseman of the New York Giants, said he was going in response to a request from Horace Stoneham, Giants' president.

"I haven't signed yet," said Zeke. "But my boss called me up (from the team's training camp at Winter Haven) and asked me to come down and talk to him. So I'm going down."

Bob Custer's Scoring Tops School Players

Leads With 270 Points for Season And Average of 12.27 Per Game; Newmyer, Of Friends, West, of Riders, Next

Eastern High's basketball togs are stored away and almost forgotten after one of its most heart-breaking seasons in years, but it will be many a day before the performance of Bob (Gun) Custer, the Tide's scoring ace, is forgotten.

In the final tabulation of points for local scholastic teams, Custer leads the pack in both total points scored as well as average per game. A grand total of 270 markers the 18-year-old star registered in Eastern's 22 games, giving him an average of 12.27 per game.

That leads the next best scorer, Alvin Newmyer, of Friends, by almost a full point. And it leads the next best interhigh player, George West, of Roosevelt, by almost four points per game.

Newmyer's mark of 11.84 points per game for the little school which could manage for only 4 victories in 11 games is almost as impressive as Custer's.

What if missed in the individual scoring column, Roosevelt made up in its team record, probably accounting for its immense success this year. The Rough Riders had only three losses in 23 games against their record, those by Navy Plebes, George Washington, Frosh and St. John's. Bethesda-Chevy Chase, the other member of the local duo which starts action in the Durham, N. C. tourney today, ranks second among the team records with 19 victories and 6 losses.

Sam Burch Joins Charlotte Hall Nine

Special Dispatch to The Post
Charlotte Hall, Md., March 14.—Three members of the Charlotte Hall Military Academy swimming team, accompanied by Coach Fred Hughes, will leave tomorrow morning for Philadelphia, where they will compete in the national interscholastic swimming championships tomorrow and Saturday.

Cadet entries in the nationals will be Dick Chambers, of Washington, in the backstroke; Byron Greene, of Annapolis, in the breast stroke; and Carl Argent, of Washington, in the 50-yard free-style event. Greene revealed that the meet last season, winning his heat, but losing out in the final.

Fred Chesley, erstwhile ace of the Charlotte Hall tankmen, will be unable to make the trip because of a badly sprained ankle sustained in practice.

Burch suffered an injured knee during the past football season, then aggravated the injury early in the basketball season. During the last game of the court season in Millersville, Pa., two weeks ago, he further aggravated the hurt, this time so seriously that it was thought that he might not be able to play baseball this season.

Duquesne May Have Star in Game Today

New York, March 14 (AP).—Mos Becker, Duquesne's spectacular forward, is expected to play against Colorado tomorrow in the final of the Invitation Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Becker fell in the game against Oklahoma Aggies last night, aggravating an old injury of his right ankle. An examination, however, showed no fractures.

Ken Overlin Fights Feature at Cumberland

Special Dispatch to The Post
Cumberland, Md., March 14.—Tomorrow night's boxing show at the State armory underwent a change yesterday when arrangements were completed to offer Charlie Brant, light-heavyweight scrapper, a Somerset, Pa., against Bob Smith, rated as Pittsburgh's leading Negro 175-pounder, instead of Ira Hughes and Irv Sarlin, also Pittsburgh light-heavyweights in the eight-round semifinal.

The card is topped by Ken Overlin, of Washington, No. 1 middleweight title contender, and Joe (Butch) Lynch, the Plainfield, N. J., leather-pusher, who won four straight fights this year.

Speed Costs Frank

Chicago, March 14 (INS).—Speed on the gridiron gained Clint Frank All-American honors at Yale, but in suburban Evanston, the same quality contributed only to a deficit in his exchequer. Arrested last month for speeding, Frank was fined $1 and $5 in municipal court today.

Club Entrains

New York, March 14 (AP).—The Orinbach basketball team, Metropolitan A. U. C. champions, leaves tomorrow night to compete in the national A. A. U. championship starting Sunday in Denver.

Silver Spring Alleys Host to Mixed Doubles

St. Patrick's Day Tourney Draws Capacity Field

A capacity field of 72 teams is virtually assured for the St. Patrick's Day mixed doubles tourney tomorrow at Silver Spring bowling alleys, and Manager Earle Stocking is ready to accommodate more if necessary.

Eight of the first ten ranking women stars and five of the first ten men are entered in the No. 1 mixed event on the duckpin tournament schedule, a ten-game event with a $10 per team entrance fee.

The winning team will receive individual plaques, the permanent trophy for a year and the top prize money, that will be around $140, with nearly $500 to be divided among the first six finishers.

With 51 teams already entered and at least 20 more waiting to complete partner arrangements, the tourney's record entry of 84 combinations will be topped when the first shift starts at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Connecticut Represented
Connecticut is sending two crack duos in Mamie McDonnell and Steve Witowski, and Alice D'Lugo, half of the national doubles championship team, and George Disney, in addition to a half-dozen other tandems not yet complete. Ann Levy, Norfolk's 16-year-old star will roll with Ernie Hauser while the leading Baltimore combination will be Ida Simmons and Bill Guetner. Miss Simmons led the entire field, men and women, in the '38 rolling with Lorraine Gulli second.

Astor Clarke, who won last year with Naomi Zimmerman, of Baltimore, will team with Lucy Rose for a partner and they will be the District favorites. Miss Gulli and Bill Kraus, '38 champions; Lucille Young and Hokie Smith and Evelyn Naylor and Tony Santini will be other leading threats from this city. Mrs. Naylor won with Howard Parsons four years ago.

The first of two afternoon blocks will start at 2 p. m. and the second at 4, while the night shifts are booked for 7 and 9 p. m. in the seventh annual event.

Other past champions include Ida Simmons and Ray Von Dreile in '36 and Billie Butler and Ed Blake in the preceding year.

Miss Simmons, who has rolled every year, has averaged better than 120 while the men who have topped the tourney are topped by Astor Clarke, the No. 1 bowler of 1935-39, with better than 128 per game.

Honors Baseball Greats
Sunday will also be a big day for the tournament duckpinners, with the Bill Wood "Dub" Sweepstakes attracting the local under 110 average near-stars and the first annual "Wilbert Robinson-John McGraw" event, honoring baseball's famed duo, scheduled for the men bowlers in Baltimore. Robinson and McGraw are the first bowlers to have won the tourney in the Monumental City.

First prize of $350 and a guaranteed prize list of $1,050 has been guaranteed for the Baltimore sweepstakes, with a $10 per man entrance fee, plus cost of games. Jimmie Marks will run the tourney at the New Highland Alleys. More than a score of this city's duckpin ace will be after the third largest prize of the season.

Locally, Bill Wood has encouraged the women bowlers to enter the "Dub" stakes, a ten-game event with a $5 entrance fee. Two-thirds handicaps will be allotted. The afternoon block starts at 2:30 p. m. and the night at 7:30 at Lucky Strike alleys.

Manager R. C. Diehl, of the Brookland Recreation Center, has announced the first annual Brookland Championship Tourney Sunday, March 31, with a guaranteed top prize of $150. The tourney will be named in the future for the 1940 winner. Diehl and George Isemann are accepting entries.

Caracas, Venezuela, March 14 (AP). The 15-round bantamweight fight between Sixto Escobar of Puerto Rico, former champion, and Simon Chavez, of Venezuela—scheduled for March 31—is expected to be canceled tomorrow. Escobar claims he will be unable to become acclimated by that time. Because of bullfights booked during April at the bull ring, it was impossible to stage the bout until May.

River Vale Six Meets Eagles at Riverside

Here's Les Colvin, 20-year-old, Washington Eagle goalie, who'll try to break up the River Vale Skeeters' goal rushes tonight on the ice at Riverside Stadium. Colvin, who appeared to be doomed to a season of inactivity at the beginning of the year, has taken over the spot formerly held by Goalie Gordon Lee.

Jersey Hockeyists Here for Last Time This Season; Victory for Washington Will Earn Second Place Berth if Rovers Lose

The River Vale Skeeters will visit the Riverside ice for the last time this season tonight, when the Washington Eagles entertain the Eastern Amateur League doormats at 8:30 o'clock.

Three members of the visitors are scheduled for tryouts with the New York Americans, Squee Allen, Jim Rae and Art Shogulst, defensemen, and tonight's game may mark their final appearance here.

The Eagles will be bidding for undisputed possession of second place, to be accomplished if they beat the Skeeters and the Atlantic City Sea Gulls turn back the New York Rovers.

After tonight's game the local season will be concluded next week when the league-leading Baltimore Orioles and second-place New York Rovers visit.

Two members of the local sextet will be out to better their ranks in the leading scorers, Hal Dewey, currently tied with Norman Calladine, of the Rovers, for third place.

and Len Burrage, who tops the defensemen in scoring.

The Skeeters have figured in two of the best games of the season here recently, despite their lowly rank, battling the Eagles to an overtime tie and losing, 6 to 4, in the last time out against the Riverside crew.

Eagles Position: Skeeters: Colvin, Goalie; Hamming, Burrage, Center; McGraw, Defense; R. W. L. Defense: Easie-Knapfel, McTear, Dewey, Quinn, Parry, Cover, Calladine, Latti, McKillop, Lee, Skeeters-Fortland, Rae, May, Herchenrater, McKinnon, Dutton, Nichol, Burns.

Montgomery Baseballers Report Monday

Coach Keller Lists Stiff Schedule for Rockville Nine

Richard Montgomery High School baseball candidates will leave their temporary classrooms in other Montgomery County high schools on Monday and report to Coach Ralph Keller on Welsh Field, in Rockville, to start practice.

Keller announced that the recent burning of the Rockville school would not affect the baseball schedule, and additional games will be added to round out the card.

After last year's record of 14 victories in 15 starts, Keller booked the stiffest schedule in the history of the school and was preparing for the first workout when fire virtually destroyed the school two weeks ago.

However, the boys, some who are attending other high schools, and others who will stay at Rockville for classes in the gymnasium and other rooms not damaged by the fire, will turn out Monday as if nothing had happened.

Last year's team was hit hard by graduation, but Bob Slater, Norman Anders, William Hill, and Worley Cheeks will be back. Candidates expected to report include Paul Monday, Tommy Ray, Fred Rickets, Robert Haynes, James Davis, Bob Stang, Bob Slater, Norman Anders, William Hill, Thad Ingalls, Worley Cheeks, Julius Martz, Ned Barrett, Edward Sprosser, Henry Allnut, Bob Siles and John Bell.

The schedule includes games with Roosevelt, Maryland Frosh, Bethesda, Blair and Hyattsville.

Steve Mamakos to Fight at Riverside Stadium April 10

Opponent Yet To Be Named For 1st Show

College Basketball Seen for Stadium Next Season: Erwin Outlines Fight Plans

Steve Mamakos, Washington's "prodigal" welterweight, will return to his home grounds for his first local fight in almost a year to launch Washington's newest fight venture at Riverside Stadium, Severine G. Leoffler and his matchmaker, Jimmy Erwin, announced yesterday.

Erwin said the first show will be staged at Riverside April 10, Wednesday night, and that a nationally ranked welterweight will be signed to meet Steve.

In conjunction with his announcement at a boxing and ice hockey luncheon yesterday at The Stables, it developed that Riverside may also be the scene of college basketball games next year.

Coach, Manager Indorse Plan
Bill Reinhart, head football and basketball coach at George Washington University, and H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown, attended the luncheon and both indorsed the set-up at Riverside as an ideal spot for double-headers involving the two schools teams.

The luncheon was devoted largely to a discussion of the boxing business in Washington, however, with Erwin outlining plans for a highly active season at Riverside.

"We're not going to apply any pressure locally," Erwin said, probably referring to Promoter Joe Turner's $500 offer to Mamakos to fight Phil Furr.

Tried to Get Zivie
"We are going to make the best possible fight and establish an honest bid for local patronage," he added. "If the fans like our bouts and turn out for our shows, we will try to give them the best. If the venture is not a paying one we will do the next best thing and close our doors."

Erwin originally attempted to sign Fritz Zivie, ranked by Ring magazine as the No. 2 welterweight contender, but Zivie has a conflicting contract. Milt Aaron, ranked No. 1 by Ring's poll, is also being sought.

"I'm not picking any spots for Steve," Matt Twomey, Mamakos' manager, said. "My only request is that he sign an outstanding opponent for my boy. We've been flooded with offers since Steve defeated Sammy Luffspring for the second time in Toronto recently."

Twomey added later in the day that the $500 offer from Turner would not be taken up "at this time."

"Don't Have to Fight Furr"
"I don't see why we have to fight Furr," he said. "After all, Steve beat Vince Pimphill and George Abrams, and both of them have defeated Furr. If Phil keeps going along and winning we may have to fight him, but at the present time I don't see where there's anything in it for us."

George Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins, also attended the luncheon and congratulated Leoffler and Erwin upon their entrance into the fight business.

Leoffler, who has just returned from Boston where he examined possibilities of a flooring which could be installed over his ice-covered floor at Riverside for basketball games, had previously indicated that he will open it to local colleges next season.

Turner Withdraws $500 Offer to Steve
Promoter Joe Turner last night said that his $500 offer to Steve Mamakos to fight Phil Furr had been withdrawn and that he wanted to correct any impression that he might be trying to "steal Mamakos" away from other promoters in Washington.

"I didn't know he had an agreement with Jim Erwin at Riverside when I made the offer, or I never would have made it," Turner said. "When I talked to Matt Twomey yesterday I upped my offer to $750 for a 15-round fight. He then told me he thought it was a good offer and he would like to take it but that he already had other plans."

Turner also said he had held a long distance telephone conversation with Al Weil, manager of the Joeey Archibald, world's featherweight champion, and had been virtually assured of a return match with Baltimore's Harry Jeffra.

"He told me I'd be the only one he'd consider in Washington for a title bout and all but told me the match is in," Turner said. "If he signs for the fight, Jeffra will come in for practically nothing but the chance at the title, and the match will go on in the middle of May."

Colgate Tennis Team To Play 17 Games
Hamilton, N. Y., March 14 (AP)—Seventeen matches will be played by the Colgate tennis team whose schedule includes a Southern trip on which four colleges will be met. Everett D. Barnes, acting director of athletics, announced today.

'Y' Extends Delhuds, but Bows, 37-36

Foul Decides Thriller In A. A. U. Tourney; Treasury's Girls Win

TOURNEY, from Page 29.

By The Washington Post at Heurich's gymnasium, is piling thrill on thrill for local court fans. What appeared on paper might prove a rout for D. and H. soon developed into another of those "dog-eat-dog" battles. Not only did the "Y" match anything the Delhuds had to show in a basketball way in the early stages, but they carried the lead to them and held a three-point lead with six minutes to go. At halftime the score had been 22-22.

Anybody's Game
In the closing minutes, as was the case most of the battle, it was anybody's game. Lucas was fouled near the end and it was his shot that did a rumba on the rim before going into pay territory.

The Delhuds, runners-up for the Heurich League title this year and second in the A. A. U. tourney, won the game from the foul line. The "Y" made 17 field goals to 14 for the winners. However, the Delhuds dropped in 9 of 13 foul shots, as compared to 9 out of 9 scored by the losers.

Harrison kept the "Y" in the running and piled up 14 points to lead scorers of both clubs. All of the Delhuds took part in the scoring with Tommy Poliard turning in three sensational shots.

Treasury Forwards Check
Treasury presented forwards from Rockville and they checked enough to turn back the hard-earned but less-experienced Veterans Administration. Margaret Lanier, Margaret Howard and Josephine Smith tossed the ball around like a hot potato and put it through the ring with regularity. Edith Koiner, also from Rockville, steadied the defense work of Edna Hill and Mickey Goetz.

Ida's Department Store, trailing 6-5, at the end of the first half, turned on the heat to win from Muller Cafe. With Clark on the front end of the attack, the Georgia avenue lads had too many second half guns for their rivals.

Beaver Dam's Course Changed; Club Bids for District Open

First Hole to Be as Par 6; Holes Revised; Banks Repeats P. G. A. Offer to Houghton

By Merrell V. Whittlesey

Beaver Dam Club members who intend to play a round or two at the Landover Club tomorrow had better get their directions from Pro Al Houghton on the first tee, or there is apt to be confusion.

For last night Houghton and the golf committee, headed by John R. Miller, changed the course around, making the first hole a 600-yard par six, the only one in this section.

For those familiar with the course, the first tee will be adjacent to the clubhouse, and the green will be the present tenth green. Then holes 11 and 12 will remain except they will be numbered 2 through 7. The eighth hole will be the present ninth and the ninth the present first, making the first nine end near the parking lot.

The second nine will start with the present second hole as the tenth, the third will be the eleventh and the fourth the twelfth, and shortened to a par four. The course will follow as is until the eighth, when play will shift to the present seventh and eighth holes as the finishing holes on the course.

Par Remains Same
The plan will be given a thorough trial and Houghton is confident it will be the permanent way to play the course. Par will remain at 72, with a stroke added to the first and one taken from the fourth, or twelfth.

The golf committee also gave Houghton permission to secure the District Open and a cash guarantee for the tournament. The professional will meet with the Middle Atlantic pros Monday at Manor and bid for the event, for a day date. He will guarantee a purse in excess of the entrance fees.

The open was stricken from the local tournament schedule last year due to no sponsor. Wifly Cox won the last two tournaments, in 1937 and 1938.

Houghton Conferred With Banks
Houghton was in conference with Sidney Banks yesterday, owner of the local tourney, and the latter repeated his offer of $1,000 for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tournament if played at the Virginia resort in the last week of April or first week in May.

Houghton will also take this up with the pros on Monday, for a decision.

Beaver Dam members will hold a buffet supper Sunday night, starting at 8:30, for Houghton and Mrs. Margaret King, recently appointed manager after 17 years with the club. Golf movies, entertainment, etc., are on the program.

as were Roosevelt Coach Herman Littman and Bethesda Coach Allan Vogt.

Despite its fears, Roosevelt appears to have an excellent chance of coming through its opening clash. Bethesda's hopes hinged for the most part on an upset.

Harrodsburg, the Riders' foe, according to most information, has a powerful record but questionable strength. It won 25 games and lost 4 during their regular season, scoring 1,064 points to the opposition's 614. Its players are something less than giants, and all young.

Roosevelt Favorite
With its starting line-up of Hymie Perlo, George West, Tom Robertson, Ernie Travis and Frank Ciangio, the Riders might be expected to hold their own in any scoring duel. Beaten only once during the season by a high school five, Roosevelt probably will rule the favorite.

In Lanier, however, Bethesda will be meeting a team with a record of 19 victories in 23 games. Its scoring ace, Center Lank Murrow, has a total of 509 points this season. He's a 6-foot-8 200-pounder who looks quite capable of scoring at will against anyone.

Games Listed
Bethesda's best bet to stop Murrow with its zone defense will probably be the starting lineup of Johnny Shumate, captain and high scorer of the team; Bill Barnley, Jim Kinsman, Elton McClure and Duke Hashagen.

In other first-round matches tomorrow the defending champion Durham High five meets Lynchburg's Virginia titlists at 11:30 a. m., and High Point comes to grips with Parker High, of Greenville, S. C., at 10 a. m.

If Roosevelt comes through its first game, it will meet the High Point-Parker winner at 7:30 tomorrow night. Bethesda would be faced by the winner of the Durham-Lynchburg affair in the feature at 9 p. m.

Plummer Wins Over Terror With 'Blackout'

Taking his cue from air-raid conscious London, Lou Plummer applied his own version of a blackout to the Golden Terror last night in Turner's Arena and won the decision before 1,000 delighted fans.

The Terror and the spectators had tossed Lou back and forth for the better part of 14 minutes, when Lou pulled his bit of strategy. He seized the Terror's black hood, turned it to the side so that the Terror's left ear was where his eyes should have been.

The rest was easy. While the golden one fumbled about the ring with a neat imitation of a blinded man, Lou took aim and gave out with a flying tackle. The Terror gave up. Referee Casey Berger gave Lou the decision, and the fans gave one and all the raspberry. It was the Terror's first loss here.

Promoter Joe Turner said Lou should have been disqualified. He acted as an afterthought Berger might have been mobbed had he done so, however. It develops the fans don't like the Terror. Lou is the boy nowadays.

All-College Night Listed At Gallaudet

Sports, Other Activities To Mark Exhibitions Tomorrow Night

Gallaudet College will stage its second annual All-College Night tomorrow, starting at 8 p. m., under leadership of Athletic Director Blair Smith and Girls' Instructor Ruth Remsburg. Activities will range from folk dancing to a football scrimmage.

These will be presented under the seasonal headings such as fall, winter and spring. Under the heading of fall will be fundamentals of dancing, gym class exhibition, badminton and football. Winter will have fencing, boxing, wrestling, square dancing, ping-pong, basketball and tumbling.

Spring activities will include volleyball, tennis, archery, softball, track, games and relays.

These exhibitions will consist of short demonstrations of the different activities, interspersed with comic stunts portraying a wrestling match with the Invisible Man, cross-country run, and a boxing match between "Joe Louis" and "Two-ton Tony" Galento.

Practically all the students are taking part in one or another phase of the program. There will be no admission charge and the general public is invited.

Vande Weghe Heads College Swim Stars

Individual Title Event Today Draws Natators From 14 Colleges

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 14.—Headed by Al Vande Weghe, Princeton's ace backstroke, and Yale's record-breaking crew, swimmers of 14 colleges will open competition here tomorrow for Eastern Intercollegiate League individual titles.

The Elis, with eight new records marked up this season, are odds-on favorites to win the majority of titles, but observers believe the mass Bulldog attack may be outdone by Vande Weghe.

The Princeton swimmer who placed second in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin in his event, holds the league backstroke record with a time of 1:34.8.

The Orange and Black star also will go after the 300-yard individual medley title. He finished second a year ago to J. T. Callahan, Columbia.

With Vande Weghe, these champions will be back: Bob Garrett, Army; 50-yard freestyle, Ned Parke, Princeton; 220-yard freestyle, and Eric Cutler, Harvard; 440 yards.

Nation Needs Powerful Spur, Col. Ayres Says

Otherwise, He Declares, Recession Will Turn Into a Depression

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 14. — Col. Leonard P. Ayres declared tonight that "some new powerful and positive force" is needed to prevent the business recession from turning into a renewed depression.

In his monthly business review for the Cleveland Trust Co., the economist traced how production declined from an alltime high of 121 in December to an estimated

"In addition it must be remembered that the processes of expansion and contraction in business cycles are cumulative in nature. They are self-reinforcing, and when they have once gained either upward or downward momentum they tend to continue for some time as though impelled by an internal energy of their own.

"The soundest reason for thinking that this decline may go a good deal further would be that it has already gone so far."

The Cleveland Trust Co. vice president found it "probable that if this decline is to be promptly checked, and production trends turned upward again, the reverse must result from some new powerful and positive force."

"Such an upturn might come from a new wave of business confidence generated by a domestic political development. Perhaps a new upturn might be induced by large scale pump-priming. It might come from suddenly increased war orders. There are other possibilities, but the likelihood remains that a new powerful and positive generating force would be needed."

"Four of here in Hagerstown, Md. have a Sunday night bridge club. I write a contributor. Last night the following unusual hand was dealt and bid as follows. We thought it might interest you enough to print in your column as an example of freak distribution. My partner, South, and I, North, made our contract on four spades, doubled and redoubled."

The cards and bidding, as it was made in Hagerstown, are shown in today's box.

"West took the six of diamonds with his ace, leading back the king of hearts, which North won with the ace. He played his deuce of clubs to the ace in dummy. Declarer then finessed the spades, but lost two tricks, both ace and jack, making his contract of four spades, losing one diamond and two spade tricks."

Next Inauguration May Be Televised

Erection of a television relay station in Washington may be undertaken by the Radio Corporation of America before the Presidential inauguration next January, it was announced yesterday.

RCA offices in New York also announced a reduction in the price of television receivers from $600 to $395 and plans to put 25,000 receivers in New York area homes within the next 12 months. Approximately 2,000 sets are in operation now.

Listen! with Slocum

In these trying days it is with some horror that a man sees a letter on his desk bearing the beautiful empty space in the upper right hand corner to testify that it is official Government business.

With palsied hands I pried the thing open yesterday and discovered it was nothing more than a gentle reminder that one of radio's better programs had escaped the attention it deserves while this pillar was about the business of mentioning Slocum and the $300,000 transmitter at W—Mg.

The show is "Democracy in Action" and it can be heard any Sunday afternoon at 2 p. m. over a station on your dial at 1490 and known roughly as WJSV.

"Democracy in Action" is of particular interest here in the Nation's Capital because it is a documentary series of educational programs on our Government at work. It is put together by CBS and the United States Office of Education and there probably isn't a Government agency lead in town who hasn't played some part in the series by supplying facts, checking scripts, etc.

Currently all the housing agencies are working on a group of programs called "Roof Over America." The show, which is a network feature, draws some 1,500 letters a week. That is a staggering figure, comparable even to my own mail around the first of the month.

There's a nice story in Newsweek

this week. Page 38, if you don't mind.

The Columbia network's daily press handout, a thing of startling beauty and information, today brought good news indeed. Lanny Ross, the golden-voiced thrush (oh, boy, what writing!) will start a series of four-times per week nightly quarter hours the first of next month. He'll be on at 7:15 p. m. Lanny is the brave guy who thrust his talented tonsils right into the middle of that lengthy collection of dramatizations that can be heard on any station in the morning and afternoon. So popular was he that they've moved him to the night time spot.

Another Nero Wolfe Story BY REX STOUT OVER MY DEAD BODY

"So you've got a client! I came here in a mood of cooperation in spite of Goodwin's tricky getaway! And what am I getting? Now you try to tell me in the space of ten seconds, just like that, your man accepted a murder case for you! Nuts!"

Archie Goodwin, confidential secretary to Nero Wolfe, really landed in complications when Wolfe sent him to check on the stolen diamonds and the mysterious paper. Carla Lovchen had hidden the paper in one of Wolfe's books when she came to ask his aid for her friend, Neya Tormic, accused of stealing diamonds from a fencing pupil, Nat Driscoll. Archie accompanied Carla to Milman's fencing studio where both girls taught. Driscoll cleared up the diamond matter and apologized. On the heels of this, the body of Percy Ludlow, another pupil, was discovered upstairs. He had been killed with an epee tipped with a deadly coil de mort. Wolfe hid them in a loaf of bread and ordered it to be eaten. Declining to answer telephone or doorbell, Wolfe listened to Archie's full account, ordered his henchmen to stand by, and decided to receive visitors. Promptly the first caller was Inspector Cramer, who was furious at Archie for running away from the crime scene.

Chapter 10
"UH-HUH," Cramer nodded grimly. "Just occurred to you, huh? Brain slowed up on you? I thought of that a long while ago, all by myself. What was it, Goodwin? What was it that happened between the time the precinct men arrived and the time you took your overcoat from the rack?"
"Nothing happened."
"Yes, it did. I want to know what it was."
"Nothing, except that when a cop relieved me at the door there was nothing I could do to help, and you know damn well what Mr. Wolfe is like. I let anything interfere with his business."
He glared at me. Then he slid back to a more comfortable position in the big leather chair, looked at Wolfe, and slowly shook his head. "I'm tired out," he said resentfully. "I was up most of last night on that Arlen case, and I was going to bed at 8 o'clock, and now here's this. And I find you're in on it even before it happens, and you can guess how pure and simple that makes it seem like."
"I can assure you," Wolfe said sympathetically, "that Mr. Goodwin's errand was neither to prevent nor to provoke murder. We really didn't know there was to be one." "Oh, I know all about his errand. Driscoll's diamonds. To hell with that. Let's be reasonable. There was Goodwin, alone right at the front door for six or seven minutes after he came downstairs with Mrs. Milman, before the radio men got there. Then they left him alone again until the precinct men arrived. He knew from the beginning what a murder investigation means for those on the premises when the squad gets on the job. If he wanted to get away and get to you to report, all he had to do was walk right out and get in his car and go. Instead of that, he waits until the precinct men come and one of them is stationed at the door, then he goes to the office and stands there and looks around, and all of a sudden he grabs his hat and coat, sneaks down to the basement, pulls a gun and scares the daylight out of a colored porter who—

"He had no daylight left in him." "Shut up. Tells the porter to stay where he is, takes a ladder to the rear court and climbs the fence and talks about his wife's cat and pretends to fall off, beats it through a kitchen and a restaurant to Forty-ninth street, and jumps a taxi and tells the driver he likes to go fast. And he tells me nothing happened between the time the precinct men came and the time he reached for his coat! I ask you, what does that sound like?"
"It sounds like a delayed cerebral process. I am accustomed to it. Unfortunately."
"It sounds bughouse. And Goodwin's not bughouse."
"No, he isn't. Not quite. Will you have some beer?"
"No. Thank you."
WOLFE PUSHED the button, leaned back and let the tips of his fingers meet at the apex of his middle mound. "Let's cut across, Mr. Cramer," he suggested helpfully. "You're busy and you need sleep. Regarding the point you have broached, as to what happened up there between this time and that time, Archie says he didn't want to be detained until midnight by the prolonged routine of your staff. I say delayed celebration. If something significant really did happen it's obvious that we don't intend to tell you, at least not now, so let's pass that. Next, if you ask why we kept ourselves incommunicado until half past nine, my reply is that I wished to get his complete report without interruption and that I abhor any disturbance during the dinner hour; further, that you had a large number of people up there to deal with and Archie could tell you nothing that you couldn't learn from them."

"What? Haven't you? Well, are you?"
"as" Wolfe grimaced. "Apparently I am. While Archie was on guard at the door Miss Tormic approached and asked him—me—to act in the matter in her interest. He accepted. I am committed, and the amount of profit that may be expected..." He shrugged. "I am committed. That was what happened that made Archie feel he should communicate with me promptly and privately. As you are aware, Mr. Cramer, I am quite capable of candor when the occasion presents—" The inspector clamped his teeth on his cigar and said through them savagely, "I knew it!"
Wolfe's brows went up a millimeter. "You knew?"
"I knew it the minute I learned Godwin had been there and gone off to chase a cat. It had already begun to look like a first-class headache, and when I heard about Goodwin that clinched it. So you've got a client! And sure enough, by God, it has to be your client that was in that room hunking with him! It would be!"
He rescued the cigar from his teeth with his left hand and hit the desk with his right fist, simultaneously. "Understand this, Wolfe! I came here in a mood of cooperation, in spite of Goodwin's tricky getaway! And what am I getting? Now you try to tell me in the space of 10 seconds, just like that, your man accepted a murder case for you! Nuts!" He hit the desk again. "I know what your abilities are, no one knows that better than I do! And like a fool I come here expecting a little disinterested discussion and you tell me you've got a client! Why have you always got to have a goddam client? Naturally from now on I can't believe a single solitary thing—"
